SECOND JUSTICE TO RETIRE IN LESS THAN A WEEK

Supreme Court Justice Harlan Retires Because Of Ill Health

WASHINGTON (AP) — John Marshall Harlan, the scholarly conservative who was generally rated as one of the Supreme Court's most able jurists, retired Thursday because of ill health. He is suffering from cancer.

The retirement, effective immediately, was the second from the nation's highest court in less than a week and leaves President Nixon in the rare situation of having two crucial appointments to make at the same time.

Associate Justice Hugo L. Black retired last Friday, also for reasons of health. Black was reported in very serious condition at Bethesda Naval Medical Center.

The 72-year-old Harlan was taken to the Bethesda Hospital Aug. 16 for treatment of what then was termed a "backache." He was later transferred downtown to the George Washington University Hospital.

After the White House announced Harlan's retirement, it was announced at the court that he is undergoing treatment for bone cancer.

The Supreme Court is scheduled to open its fall term on Oct. 4 with only seven justices on the bench and several major issues awaiting decision. Perhaps paramount among these is the question of whether capital punishment is constitutional.

White House press secretary Ronald L. Ziegler said Nixon recognized the situation and was expected "to move as swiftly as possible to find two highly qualified individuals to fill the vacancies."

When Black's retirement was announced Ziegler said Nixon was considering a list of seven potential successors. Ziegler said Thursday he felt the list could be expanded. "I don't want to lock it at seven," he said.

The double vacancy was the first since 1941 when Justice James C. McReynolds retired and Chief Justice Charles E. Hughes quit five months later.

Successor Will Be 100th Justice

WASHINGTON (AP) — The successor to John M. Harlan will be the 100th Supreme Court justice in the nation's history.

To date, 98 men have served on the court. The retirement of Hugo L. Black last week opened the way for the 99th.

President Frankin D. Roosevelt filled both shortly after Hughes stepped down.

Earlier Nixon appointed Chief Justice Warren E. Burger and Associate Justice Harry A. Blackmun.

The Harlan retirement will not have as much ideological impact on the court's makeup as will Black's. Harlan was a solid member of the court's conservative side and Nixon is expected to replace him with an appointee of similar bent. Black, on the other hand, was considered a member of the liberal bloc.

Nixon has commented frequently that he wants nominees who are "strict constructionists" of the Constitution.

Mrs. Richard M. Nixon has been calling recently for a woman justice. She commented earlier this week that Nixon had named several women to district courts for grooming "in case they don't get one this time," referring to the Justice Black vacancy.

Chief Justice Burger said Harlan's decision to retire was "a source of deep regret to all his colleagues and a loss to the Court and to the country."

Ziegler relayed similar praise from Nixon.

"He is one of the great legal scholars in the history of the court and will be recorded by history as one of the towering figures of the court," the President said.

Nixon Says Phase 2 Will Have Teeth, No Expiration Date, May Be Broadened

DETROIT (AP) — President Nixon pledged Thursday night that his Phase 2 system of price and wage controls will have enforcement teeth and no expiration date—and might be broadened to cover interest rates.

The President also declared that the 10 per cent import surcharge will not be lifted—"even to placate some of our friends who are concerned about it"—until other nations join in an overhaul of the system of currency exchange rates.

Assuring the Economic Club of Detroit that the American producer "simply wants an equal shot, an equal chance," he added in a question-and-answer exchange broadcast on nationwide radio:

"The surcharge will not be removed until we get action on that score."

When the 90-day freeze on prices, wages and rents expires on Nov. 13, he said, it will be replaced with a system which concentrates on major industries whose price and wage behavior influences the whole economy. The system, he promised, will provide for adjustment of inequities—including the postponement of teachers' and others' pay increases—which are now frozen until Nov. 13.

Nixon told his questioners in the automotive capital also that:

—The reported disturbances in mainland China will not change his plans to visit that country. His travel plans "will be announced at an appropriate time," he said.

—The qualifications he wants in a nominee for the Supreme Court might include service on the House or Senate Judiciary Committee—a reference that could apply to Rep. Richard H. Poff, R-Va., a senior member of the House committee.

—He still wants Congress to enact his welfare reform and revenue-sharing proposals this year. The present welfare system "is a national disgrace," he said.

—The economy is on its way up, 1972 "will be a very good year, and anybody who bets on the long-term future of the economy is going to win his bet."

—He will not let environmentalists "destroy the industrial system that made this country great." That was in reply to a question on the automobile's contribution to air pollution.

Nixon disclosed that the possibility of controlling interest rates, "particularly with regard to loans to consumers," is being considered but no decision has been made.

"What happens to interest rates, whether they continue to stay where they are or to go down, will have a great deal to do with whether we have the Federal Reserve move in," he said.

Nixon said the country will return to a free economy as soon as possible, but not until the problem of inflation has been effectively dealt with.

"Until then, we feel it is necessary to have controls backed up by teeth, made effective by the government," he said.

Nixon said his price-wage curb has the support of the American people, but noted that it will also be necessary "to have government sanctions to back it up—which there will be."

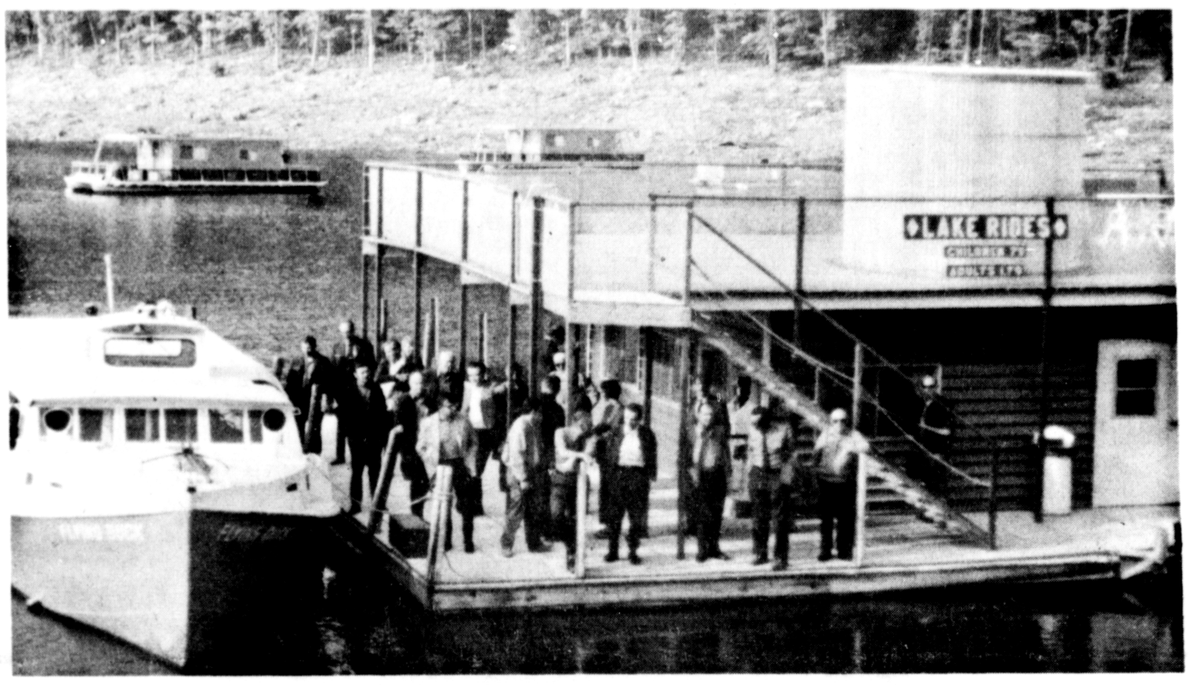

Nixon was asked if it would not be desirable to launch a campaign to educate the public and some leaders that the most effective creator of jobs is growth in corporation profits.

"To say anything for profits before this audience is like the preacher talking to the choir," he told his audience of industrialists.

Nixon also said profits provide much of the government's revenue for carrying out its programs.

He said the major reason profits are essential to a strong growing economy is that it is

McGovern Charges S. Vietnam Organized A Riot Against Him

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. George S. McGovern charged Thursday the rioters who stoned and firebombed him in Saigon last week included members of South Vietnam's civil defense forces hired and paid by President Nguyen Van Thieu's government.

The South Dakota Democrat leveled the charge at a news conference called to report on his 11-day trip to Paris, Saigon and Tokyo.

McGovern declared that it appeared as if Thieu, "having found a successful way to prevent anybody else other than himself from running for president in South Vietnam, was attempting the same thing here in the United States."

The State Department said it had no independent account of the incident.

McGovern, who will lose his status as the only formally declared presidential candidate when Sen. Fred R. Harris of Oklahoma enters the race Friday, said he considers the issues of Vietnam and U.S. economic difficulties "inseparable" in his quest for the presidency.

"When we talk about the war," he said, "when we talk about a defense budget which goes up $4 billion while the President preaches economy, we are talking about all the other issues before this country."

In the Senate, meanwhile, McGovern lost in a move to require President Nixon to give Congress, along with next year's regular defense budget, an alternative budget limited to $60 billion—nearly $20 billion below this year's.

The vote was 58 to 26 against the amendment, which also would have required the administration to develop plans for conversion of defense industries to civilian pursuits.

The McGovern amendment was the day's major business as the Senate grappled with the proposals to cut the $21 billion measure authorizing funds for military hardware and research. Most amendments are expected to be defeated.

One that is expected to pass, directing total U.S. withdrawal from Indochina within six months if American prisoners are freed, will be introduced Monday, Democratic leader Mike Mansfield told reporters.

In the House, Rep. Paul N. McCloskey, R-Calif., introduced a resolution to ban U.S. military operations in Indochina after March 31 unless release of American prisoners of war has been negotiated by then.

McCloskey said he would press for action on his resolution unless President Nixon responds affirmatively by Oct. 1 to the expression of Congress in the draft extension bill to end

U.S., S. Vietnamese Forces Ordered On Special Alerts

SAIGON (AP) — American and South Vietnamese forces were ordered on special alerts Thursday to meet a threat of increasing enemy attacks aimed at disrupting South Vietnam's Presidential election Oct. 3.

For the 215,000 U.S. servicemen, the alert appeared designed to keep them clear of terrorist attacks and political strife such as the antigovernment street demonstrations and anti-American firebombings of the past two weeks.

More demonstrations are planned by militant students, war veterans, and opposition political groups to protest the unopposed candidacy of President Nguyen Van Thieu.

There was evidence of mounting shellings, terror and sapper attacks by North Vietnamese and Viet Cong units.

South Vietnamese military headquarters reported 21 to 29 shellings and other enemy incidents daily for the past three days.

The U.S. Command announced that beginning Friday "all U.S. forces in the Republic of Vietnam will take necessary security measures in anticipation of a possible increase in enemy activity . . .

"U.S. military personnel will not enter populated areas, including villages, hamlets, and urban areas, except on essential official business or travel between billets and places of duty. Vehicle movement outside U.S. installations will be limited to essential travel."

A command spokesman, Capt. James D'Entremont, said: "Intelligence indicates increased enemy action, which could take the form of indirect fire attacks ground attacks or terrorist activities. The election could be a factor in the enemy's plans.

The alert starting Friday will run at least to Oct. 6.

In war action, South Vietnamese troops launched a new thrust into southern Cambodia. It is aimed at clearing western Svay Rieng Province south of Highway 1, the main road linking the Cambodian capital of Phnom Penh with Saigon.

The number of troops engaged was not disclosed.

National Welfare Costs Rise 27% In Fiscal 1971

WASHINGTON (AP) — National welfare costs skyrocketed a record 27 per cent in the fiscal year ending last June 30 despite a shrinking of relief rolls in the last two months, the government said Thursday.

The Department of Health, Education and Welfare said state, local and federal expenditures for all forms of public assistance, including medical aid and welfare, increased $3.4 billion to $16.3 billion in the 12 months. The total is almost double the $8.9 billion four years ago.

"These are the biggest increases in the history of the program," said John D. Twiname, administrator of HEW's social and rehabilitation service.

Paradoxically, a downturn toward the end of the record 1970-71 welfare year may signal the beginning of a period of public assistance austerity.

With eleven states cutting welfare eligibility and payments, relief rolls dropped in June for the second consecutive month.

The 14.3 million recipients in June were 22,000 fewer than May. The number on rolls four years ago was 8.9 million.

HEW disclosed meanwhile that an army of 80,000 new federal employes in 4,000 offices nationwide would be needed to run the welfare system under President Nixon's reform proposal.

They would replace 61,000 state employes and would almost double the size of the 107,000-man HEW department, according to Richard P. Nathan, deputy undersecretary of HEW. The job of replacing 200 separate state and local welfare systems with a computer-based federal program would require 18 months after congressional approval of the President's family assistance plan, Nathan added.

He said possibly 25 million persons would have to be interviewed to determine their eligibility for benefits, including reinvestigations of the 14.3 million persons now receiving relief.

The family assistance program would replace separate state welfare systems with federal checks totaling $2,400 a year for a family of four. The working poor would be eligible for the first time for supplemental assistance.

The reform plan passed the House but is bogged down in the Senate Finance Committee. Nixon has set back the proposed effective date one year

Allegheny River Reaches Lowest Level Of Decade

The Allegheny River Thursday morning reached its lowest level in the past decade as the gates of the Kinzua Dam were raised to release water from the reservoir now standing at its lowest September pool on record.

The weather bureau in Warren reported a river level of 1.9 feet and rising as of 7 a.m. Thursday morning. James Reier said that the previous low level on the river was in 1960, some five years prior to the Kinzua Dam.

The gates of the Kinzua Dam were opened Thursday from a flow of 500 cubic feet per second to a predicted flow of 1400 cfs for Friday. The Corps of Engineers has said that the gates of the dam would be operated to maintain the minimum flow in the river of two feet at Warren.

Since the closing of the gates six years ago, the Corps has experienced difficulty in maintaining a stable reservoir and river level because of rainfall averages well above normal. This year, for the first time, rainfall has been well below normal. This fact is reflected in the present reservoir level of 1312.5, the lowest recorded to date for September.

According to Corps of Engineer figures released daily to the news media, the reservoir this year reached the desired summer pool at 1328.1 on June 16, but the level has continually fallen since that date.

Launching ramps at the Forest Service recreation sites were closed well before the end of the boating season because of the low water, and the Wolf Run Marina ramp has been closed for almost a month.

County Teachers Renew Hopes Of Receiving Salary Increases

The hopes of Warren County's teachers were renewed yesterday that they will receive negotiated salary increases in the near future following the announcement that a test suit has been filed in Erie.

The Pennsylvania State Education Assn. has filed suit with the local chapter in Erie against the school district decision to withhold the negotiated wage increase.

At the same time, Erie teachers have asked school officials to join them in a declaratory judgment on the effect of the federal wage-price freeze on teacher salaries.

The PSEA last week said their attorneys had concluded that President Nixon does not have the power, except in a national emergency such as wartime, to freeze wages and prices.

PSEA Executive Secretary Robert Phelps then called on school districts to join the state association in a federal court test of the President's order. He said the PSEA would go to court "in any instance in which we feel the rights of our members are being abridged."

Court action contemplated by PSEA since the wage-price freeze went into effect apparently had been "shelved" after the Office of Economic Preparadness had ruled three weeks ago that mandated increases could be paid under the wage-price freeze. The OEP, however, reversed that ruling last week at which time school boards, including the Warren County School District, advised teachers that they could not pay the mandated increments as previously announced.

Since the PSEA action is being taken on behalf of all of its members, there will be no action by the Warren County Education Assn. nor any of the local PSEA chapters throughout Pennsylvania.

"We will just have to sit back and wait for the court ruling," the president of the WCEA said Thursday. Jon Carlson said there is considerable optimism among PSEA leaders in Harrisburg and with local chapters that the court will issue a ruling favorable to the teachers.

Atty. George Levin, regional PSEA legal counsel, said at a new conference in Erie earlier this week that his legal action will argue on two points against the freeze.

First, Levin contends President Nixon's 90-day freeze order cannot prevent teachers from receiving a state-mandated salary increase which was guaranteed by state legislature.

Government Goes To Court To Roll Back Teachers' Hikes

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government went to court Thursday for the first time in an effort to enforce the 90-day wage-price-rent freeze announced by President Nixon last month.

The Justice Department announced it has filed suit in federal court at New Orleans seeking to roll back pay raises for 2,800 teachers in Jefferson Parish (County), La.

The teachers were to receive the first increment of raises averaging $400 per year in paychecks to be distributed Friday.

The Justice Department said it was seeking an injunction to bar the raises and asked that the increase be deducted from future checks.

The suit was filed against the Jefferson Parish School Board at the recommendation of George A. Lincoln, director of the Office of Emergency Preparedness.

A Justice Department spokesman said a hearing has been set for Oct. 7.

Secondly, Levin's suit will contend that the price freeze cannot prevent teachers from receiving salary increases from a contract that became effective before the freeze.

Levin said the PSEA Erie case will be the only one in the state. PSEA officials decided to use Erie's case as a test to settle in the courts a problem which has been appearing in districts around the state since Nixon's announcement, Levin said.

The National Education Assn. announced in Washington last week it would test the constitutionality of the wage freeze in federal court in Washington.

PSEA pointed out that state laws call for a $300 annual salary increment for teachers, a statute which has been on the books since 1963.

"This increment is included in the salary agreement for Erie teachers," Levin stated. "Refusal by the Erie Board to pay the salaries impairs the obligation of a contract legally entered into by both parties and effective prior to the wage freeze, which we contend is in violation of the Federal Constitution."

Phelps said in Harrisburg that PSEA is taking the action in Erie because of Erie's paramount role in establishing rights under terms of Act 195, the Public Employe Bargaining Law.

Erie was the first education association certified by the Pennsylvania Labor Relations Board following a collective bargaining election a year ago and its contract settlement for the 1971-72 school year was one of the first resolved last spring.

The president of the county's school district said last night that there is no action that the board can take now. Melvin Keller said, "We have repeatedly said that we will be happy to pay the negotiated increase when somebody tells us in writing that we can legally do so."

Harlan

Harlan has served on the Supreme Court since March 28, 1955. He was named to the bench in the midst of the controversy over school desegregation.

His career on the high court stood in somewhat of an ironic contradiction to the battle waged in the Senate over his confirmation.

Although he consistently voted with the conservative bloc, after his appointment it was conservative opposition which held up his nomination in the Senate for more than four months.

The nomination was made by President Dwight D. Eisenhower on Nov. 9, 1954, to fill the vacancy left by the death of Associate Justice Robert H. Jackson.

Indochina

ent Robin Mannock, reporting from Cambodia, said the new South Vietnamese drive was undertaken at the request of the Cambodians and that enemy pressure has been building lately in the operation area.

The U.S. Command disclosed that many of the 200 bombing strikes inside North Vietnam Tuesday were against fuel depots in the southern panhandle.

Earlier announcements had indicated the raids were primarily against missile and antiaircraft positions that were threatening U.S. planes attacking targets in Laos.

McGovern

American involvement "at the earliest practicable date."

McGovern criticized the 250-plane bombing raid on North Vietnam Tuesday as motivated solely by a desire to "save as long as possible the repressive military government" of Thieu.

An earlier Mansfield amendment, with a nine-month deadline, was approved 61 to 38 as a rider to the draft bill but diluted by Senate-House conferees in the final version of the measure on which congressional action was completed Tuesday.

Nixon May Name Woman Justice

ATLANTA, Ga. (AP) — The Atlanta Constitution said Thursday that President Nixon is considering appointing 37-year-old Rita Hauser, a New York attorney, to the U.S. Supreme Court to replace retiring Justice John M. Harlan.

The Constitution, quoting an "informed source," said the Nixon administration would "like to nominate a woman for the Harlan post and that Mrs. Hauser "was the most likely choice."

Mrs. Hauser was active in Nixon's 1968 presidential campaign and was appointed by the President in 1969 as the U.S. representative to the United Nations Commission on Human Rights.

She would be the first woman in history to be nominated to the high court, the newspaper said.

The Constitution said it had learned from an "informed source" that 5th U.S. Circuit Court Appeals Judge Lewis R. Morgan of Newnan, Ga., also is "on the administration's list of contenders for the nomination."

The paper said Mrs. Hauser is widely known for civil rights activities and is "generally regarded as a liberal."

Shoplifter Nabbed At Jamesway

Security guards at Jamesway in North Warren Wednesday spotted another shoplifter in action.

Turned over to Conewango Township Police Chief was Richard M. Walters, 20, of 300 Burncoat st., Worcester, Mass., who stole a 41-cent item, police said.

Walters was arraigned before Justice of the Peace Raymond Gilmore and ordered to pay a $25 fine, costs and make restitution.

Two Driverless Trucks Damaged

Two driverless trucks were damaged Thursday about 4:12 p.m. when one of the parked vehicles drifted into the other. Charges are pending against the driver for leaving her vehicle unattended.

Carol J. Boyd, 34 of Jamestown, N.Y. faces the charge after the vehicle she allegedly left unattended on the south side of Pennsylvania ave. east drifted across the avenue in a westerly direction and struck a tractor, trailer owned by Crossett Inc. parked by Lyle Eugene Fuller, 39 of Frewsburg, N.Y. Borough Policeman James P. Nelson, who estimated damage at $425 said that the Boyd truck traveled approximately 225 feet before stopping.

Victim Charged

One victim of a two car accident on Dutch Hollow rd. near Jamestown, N.Y. at 10:30 p.m. Thursday, who complained of a bump on the head, was charged with causing the accident, according to the Chautauqua County sheriff's office.

Charged with improper backing was Charles W. Swan, 62, of West Oak Hill rd., Jamestown when he backed out of a private drive into the path of an auto traveling north driven by David L. Saullo, 22, of Woodlawn ave., Jamestown.

Bad Check Charge

Conewango Township police Thursday arrested a man on charges of passing bad checks.

Wilbur L. Campbell, 28 of 2680 Pennsylvania ave. west ext. was charged before Justice of the Peace Raymond Gilmore for a $25 and a $16.50 check passed at local business establishments on July 31 and August 27. Campbell was released after paying costs and making restitution on the criminal charge.

only through profits that industry can provide the new plants, new equipment to make it competitive in the world market.

"I am for profits, because I believe more profits means more jobs," he said.

In response to a question on profits, Nixon noted that if there is control over costs and prices there is some control on profits. The way to increase profits, he added, is to expand business and create more jobs.

The questioner did not specifically ask the President to comment on the omission of profits from the control structure, but Nixon gave his reason anyway. It is when profits are plowed back into industry that the economy expands, he said.

Flanked by an array of political and other advisers, Nixon made his first appearance as President in the Detroit area, in a state he lost to Hubert H. Humphrey in 1968 by more than 220,000 votes.

The Economic Club has a membership roster of 2,500 including big names from industry, labor, business and banking. Each member at the dinner was allowed to bring one guest.

Less than an hour before the President arrived at Cobo Hall, a crowd of several thousand protesting pickets gathered outside.

Many of the demonstrators carried signs reading, "Wall Street Loves the Freeze" while others held signs urging "Freeze War, Not Prices."

A huge red banner with black letters urged, "Avenge the Attica Prisoners," a reference to the Attica, N.Y., prison riot.

Dozens of uniformed police kept the demonstrators away from the hall's main entrance.

Nixon said when this nation's economy produces at full capacity, "we should in no circumstances spend more than the tax system produces."

But when it is not producing at full capacity, as it has not for the past 25 years, he said, government spending "to pick up the slack in the economy can be justified."

He said in his own administration, "our budgets are out of balance," in the sense that "we are spending more than we are getting in taxes." But he said the amount it is out of balance is not inflationary.

"What we want to do is get the economy back to full capacity without war," he said, and then the nation could have a balanced budget.

Nixon said the 10 per cent surcharge on imports he imposed will not be a permanent wall around the United States. "The United States producer simply wants an equal shot, an equal chance," he said. "We're not trying to be belligerent, were not declaring war on the other trading nations." He said this country needs a new approach to the system of exchange rates. "That means the surcharge will not be removed until we get action on that score," he said. He also said he seeks removal of restrictions on imports of U.S. goods into other nations.

Without elaborating on his administration's demand for the upward valuation of the currencies of other nations, he made it clear that removal of the surcharge depends on such action.

The President disclosed that the question of controlling interest rates is still open, especially loans to consumers. Interest rates were not included with prices, wages and rents when the freeze was clamped on.

The trend of interest rates during the rest of the 90-day freeze will have "a great deal of effect on whether we feel it is necessary to have the Federal Reserve move in" to control of interest rates in the post-freeze period.

Inside the hall, a panel of 10 club members representing a cross-section of professional and labor interests, arranged to screen written questions from the audience for submission to the President.

The Q&A format has been used for years at news conferences, but there is no advance sifting or editing.

NBC and the National Public Radio network arranged for live radio coverage starting at 9 p.m. EDT but there was no network setup for live television.

Nixon asked two of his top economics experts, George Shultz, director of the Office of Management and Budget, and Paul W. McCracken, chairman of the Council of Economic Advisers, to accompany him.

Since 1900 about 16 million acres of forestland have been set aside for parks and wilderness areas, reports the American Forest Institute.

Federal Inspectors Impound 50,000 Turkeys

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Agriculture Department said Thursday that federal inspectors have impounded 50,000 turkeys at a Minnesota processing plant because of suspected residues from PCB, an industrial chemical.

Dr. Kenneth M. McEnroe, head of meat and poultry inspection, said the turkeys were being held at Swift Dairy & Poultry Co., Detroit Lakes, Minn.

The processor is a subsidiary of Swift & Co., the nation's largest meat packing firm.

Swift & Co. said it had voluntarily withheld the turkeys from the market after detecting "through its normal testing procedures unexpected levels of PCB in the birds."

"Swift then alerted the U.S. Department of Agriculture that it had voluntarily withheld the birds and the USDA, after testing the turkeys, confirmed Swift's findings," the company's statement said.

McEnroe said the turkeys were from six or seven flocks grown at Peterson-Biddick Co., Wadena, Minn. He said not all of the 50,000 turkeys were thought to be contaminated but enough of them were to warrant holding the entire batch.

He said there was no indication that any of the tainted turkeys had reached consumers.

Authorities so far have not found the source of PCB contamination, McEnroe said.

Several months ago PCB contamination resulted in the destruction of at least 88,000 broiler chickens after they ate feed into which PCB had leaked at a Wilmington, N.C. plant.

A 10-state search was ordered for recall of the tainted feed. Large amounts of contaminated egg products also were held off the markets.

Asked if it was possible the Minnesota case involved the contaminated feed from North Carolina, McEnroe said the Food and Drug Administration was checking into that possibility.

"It's doubtful that you would have any from Wilmington up there," he said. "But I'm sure it will be run down."

H.H. Schacko, an official of Peterson-Biddick Co., said "there's nothing to that" regarding the theory the turkeys ate feed from the North Carolina plant. He declined further comment.

The Agriculture Department announced late last Friday that PCB contamination had been found in some Minnesota turkeys and that the search for other tainted products was under way there and in North Dakota and South Dakota.

The name of the poultry firm had been withheld until Thursday. Department sources said officials had been notified as early as the first week in August that PCB had been found.

The chemical PCB, or polychlorinated biphenyls, is chemically similar to the pesticide DDT and has been linked in tests on laboratory animals with some skin disease, liver damage, and birth defects.

Poor Aren't Getting Any Poorer

PITTSBURGH (AP) — The rich are getting richer, but the poor aren't getting any poorer, George Hay Brown, director of the U.S. Bureau of Census, said Thursday.

"The total number of Americans below the poverty level is decreasing," he told a luncheon meeting of the American Marketing Association. "The number of poor among blacks, whites and other minority groups is less than it used to be."

Brown directs a staff of 6,000 persons, which increases to about 10,000 every 10 years for the census.

He predicted the nation's population, which was 206 million in 1970, will increase from 60 million to 80 million over the next 30 years, and he said it is now advancing about 2 million per year.

He also noted, however, that from 1965 to the present, the birthrate in this country is at a low level and is continuing to fall.

Brown, 61, holds a doctorate in economics.

Sen. Long Predicts Prompt Action On President's Tax Proposals

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON (AP)— Sen. Russell B. Long Thursday predicted prompt action on President Nixon's tax proposals because of changes made by the House Ways and Means Committee.

"The Ways and Means action greatly improves chances for prompt passage of this legislation," said the Louisiana Democrat, sketching in a tentative timetable that would see Senate consideration before the end of next month.

"It was my thought all along that the President's original request was unfairly weighted in favor of tax reductions for big-business," said Long, head of the Senate Finance Committee.

If the House clears the tax bill on Oct. 5, as tentatively scheduled, Long said, his committee hearings will probably begin Oct. 7.

The key change made by Ways and Means was removal of a step reduction in the tax credit the President proposed for business investment in equipment. The administration proposed a 10 per cent credit for 12 months, followed by a permanent 5 per cent figure. The House committee fixed the credit figure at 7 per cent, and gave additional tax relief to the individual taxpayer, particularly in the low-income brackets.

While Long was saying he would personally like to see some attempt to lower interest rates, word coming from the House held that there was no relief in sight.

"Interest rates have not come down for the overwhelming majority of the American consumers," declared Rep. Wright Patman, DTex., chairman of the House Banking Committee.

Patman called the administration contention that credit controls would mean freezing interest at high rates "the purest form of hogwash."

The Federal Home Loan Bank Board reported Thursday that interest rates on conventional home loans advanced in August for the third straight month.

Board Chairman Preston Martin said the average effective rate on new homes was 7.73 per cent in August, up seven-hundredths over July. For existing home loans, the rate went up eight-hundredths to 7.71 for August.

Martin said the terms on nearly all the loans included in the August averages were approved prior to Aug. 15 when the President's programs went into effect.

Nixon's wage-price-rent freeze does not include controls on interest rates. There are indications that the post-freeze program will probably not include interest controls either.

If interest rates were not behaving as hoped for, there was also something to be desired in the international monetary situation.

But come what may, Secretary of the Treasury John B. Connally told newsmen, the administration stands on its position against a change in the price of gold.

"Obviously a few currencies are out of line," said Connally, mentioning the German mark, the French and Swiss francs, and the Japanese yen.

"But if we change the price of gold, we put all those other currencies out of line."

His comments came after a closed-door luncheon briefing of Long's Finance Committee where the administration got high marks for its balance-of-payments efforts.

Printing Firm Establishes Four-Day, 40-Hour Week

PITTSBURGH (AP) — A small printing firm in the Squirrel Hill section has established a four-day, 40-hour work schedule for its 11 employes.

"I think it's wonderful," said Linda Laus, an artist at Hoechstetter Printing Co. "I don't mind the 10-hour day at all and I just love the three-day weekend."

Harvey Hoechstetter, owner of the color printing and offset firm, said he has been experimenting with the schedule change since July. He notified his employes by mail Thursday of the permanent change from the eight-hour, five-day week.

"We believe this to be the first time in the U.S.A. for a commercial printer to adopt this progressive plan," Hoechstetter said.

The local Chamber of Commerce and the Smaller Manufacturing Council said they know of no other firm, large or small, working a standard four-day work week in Pittsburgh.

"No one was overly enthused about it when I first raised the subject," said Hoechstetter, who started the business after graduating from Carnegie-Mellon University eight years ago," "and no one was set against it."

In July, Hoechstetter and his employes agreed to give the Tuesday-through-Friday plan a two-week trial. It stretched into two months, and now is permanent.

Dawna Oluschak, a young artist at the plant, was the only person to object to the plan. With Hoechstetter's approval, she continues to work the old five-day week.

"It's just physically exhausting," said Miss Oluschak. "At 4:30 p.m. I'm ready to call it quits for the day. Other than tiring, I would have no objections."

Economically, the employes say there is generally little difference from before, although there are less lunches, less traveling and less parking problems.

Judge Refuses To Order Restitution To Victims

ERIE —Although a firm dealing in self-confidence was ordered to stop using fraudulent business practices in the state, Erie County Judge Linday McClelland has refused to order restitution to its victim, saying:

"I wonder how far this court is expected to go to protect Pennsylvanians from their own folly and stupidity if they voluntarily leave this state."

The state's compiaint alleged that Pennsylvanians were being taken to Indianapolis and Canada and sold courses there by Dare to be Great, Inc., a firm which sells courses in self confidence.

The suit had been filed by the State Bureau of Consumer Protection against the firm and its owner, Glenn W. Turner.

Specifically, the firm may not pay or promise to pay any person who buys a course or convinces others to buy courses. It also may not use confusing or misleading advertising or tell people they can earn amounts which are not earned by most of the firm's salesmen.

The firm has been accused of violating the state's unfair trade practices and consumer protection laws.

What About NATO?

What about NATO? This is the question Senator Mike Mansfield asked during a recent European trip during which time he visited most of the countries having membership in the North Atlantic Treaty Organization. Then, in a Senate speech, he detailed the answers and impressions gained as he personally interpreted them.

The Western European nations remain firmly wedded to a joint defense system as a means of self preservation, but there is little indication that they are willing to increase their committments in either financing NATO's costs or providing increased manpower.

Rather, the Senator thinks, there are reasons to think that some nations will attempt to reduce their participation, and in any event, will not participate in NATO to any greater extent than what they would be doing for themselves without NATO.

There is also a reluctance of any European nation to take over any part of the heavy U.S. burden, as the Senator sees it, and the mood indicates a search for peace rather than confrontation and war.

In addition, the Senator found that NATO remains rigid in its design for conventional warfare and is overmanned, over staffed, and overfinanced by the United States. Long after Western European nations have gained the capacity to play their part in the conventional defense system. Using their resources instead to improve their economic positions and the lot of their peoples.

In summing up his impressions, the Senator suggested that the U.S. should reduce its NATO committments and withdraw at least two of the four divisions presently committed to NATO, reduce the U.S. "command" committment and encourage the appointment of a European as commander-in-chief, push for a multinaval NATO force to decrease the need for the entire 6th Fleet in the Mediterranean, and develop effective techniques to perpetuate the NATO concept while streamlining its essentials.

This, he thinks, due to the present political trends in Europe , could be accomplished within the next five years.

And for this reason, he will reintroduce his amendment calling for a reduction of Europe-based troops at the first opportunity—a move that sounds very practical if the Senator's evaluation of the situation is valid.

Nazi Editor Now Advises GOP National Committee

By Jack Anderson

WASHINGTON— A former Nazi editor, who was Adolf Hitler's leading propagandist in occupied Slovakia during the 1940s, has now become a power on the Republican National Committee.

He is Dr. Joseph Pauco, who trumpeted the Nazi line throughout Slovakia and hailed the Nazi persecution of the Jews. As late as 1957, he defended his past Nazi activities as "the cause of great and sacred truth."

Yet this notorious ex-Nazi was invited by President Nixon to attend a White House prayer service on Sept. 12. While no other White House worshiper may have been more in need of prayer, it is ironical that Pauco should wind up at a Nixon devotional. For his mentor and mahatma, Joseph Tiso, the puppet dictator of Slovakia, was hanged as a war criminal.

Hitler ended his bloody conquest of Czechoslavakia by dividing the country and installing Tiso as the ruler of Slovakia. Pauco was named editor-in-chief of Tiso's official organ, Slovak, which became the strident voice of the Nazi regime. In effect, Pauco became Slovakia's Joseph Goebbels.

One of Pauco's close associates in the Nazi hierarchy was Dr. J.M. Kirschbaum, who has been accused by the Jewish Community Council in Prague of sending Slovakian Jews to the gas chambers in Auschwitz and other murder camps.

PICTURE PROOF

Kirschbaum denies the charge. But we have dug out, at least, an old newspaper picture of Kirschbaum in his Slovak SS uniform, his hand raised in the Hitler salute.

Pauco and Kirschbaum escaped Tiso's fate by fleeing to the West. Pauco reached the U.S. in 1950; Kirschbaum got only as far as Toronto.

Eventually, Pauco took over the weekly newspaper, Slovak v Amerike, in Middletown, Pa., and named his old friend Kirschbaum as an adviser.

The natty, charming Pauco was brought into the Republican National Committee as chief Slovak-American adviser by the former chairman, Interior Secretary Rogers Morton. The present chairman, Kansas Senator Bob Dole, appointed Pauco comptroller of the committee's ethnic council.

Pauco is also serving as a Nixon appointee on the Small Business Administration advisory council.

Not long ago, Pauco and Kirschbaum helped to establish the Slovak World Congress, and they held a meeting in Toronto in June. They were showereed with greetings from Senators John Tower, R-Tex., Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., Roman Hruska, R-Neb., and others.

Senators Robert Taft, R-Ohio, and Claiborne Pell, D-R.I., actually showed up in Toronto to address the meeting.

From the White House on down, these prominent Americans can be excused for being unaware of the Nazi backgrounds of Pauco and Kirschbaum. But the official who is supposed to keep track of ex-Nazis, Assistant Attorney General Robert Mardian, the Justice Department's internal security specialist, also attended the Toronto affair.

SECURITY OFFICIAL DUPED

Incredibly, Mardian told the ex-Nazis and their pals that he felt "especially akin to you and your organization." He declared stirringly: "It is a common heritage that binds us together here today."

Then, with an oratorical flourish that must have caused Pauco and Kirschbaum to choke, Mardian added, "It matters not whether a dictatorship is communist, fascist or Nazi—all dictatorships are without respect for liberty."

Mardian might have picked up a clue to Pauco's Nazi past by reading his biography in Who's Who. For Pauco lists among his accomplishments the editorship of the old Slovak daily. If this was missed by Mardian, it was picked up by an amateur Nazi hunter and Democratic Party official, Bill Quinn, who identified the daily s a Nazi mouthpiece.

He tipped us off, and we have now traced Pauco's past in old Library of Congress records, books and newspapers.

"There is only one alliance, and that alliance is with Germany," wrote Pauco in a signed editorial on Sept. 17, 1944. Again on Oct. 11, 1944, he printed: "The great German Reich, led by Fuehrer Adolf Hitler, proved to the Slovaks its benevolence."

In a typical diatribe against the Jews, his Nazi newspaper declared on Sept. 3, 1944: "We all know about their moral decay and their murderous hatred of the Christian people."

Is it possible that Pauco, now 57, has changed his views after 25 years? As late as August, while he was preparing to pray with the President, he praised the war criminal Tiso as a "martyr."

Footnote: My associate Les Whitten reached Pauco at Middletown. He denied that his wartime newspaper was a Nazi organ. "I ran a Slovak paper," he said. Asked about the paper's attack on the Jews, he said at first, "I can't remember," then declared: "We were friends of the Jews." He added heartily, "Anybody who says we were Nazis is full of baloney." The Republican National Committee, he said, would verify his good name. Kirschbaum has an unlisted telephone in Toronto and couldn't be reached.

JIM BISHOP: REPORTER

My wife and I are still on the road, driving like friendly fiends and clogging the air-conditioner with cigarette smoke. We don't smoke for joy; only because we don't trust each other at the wheel.

Anyone who regards long drives as being dull is eminently right. So far, we have covered 1,750 miles and ran out of conversation the first hour. I know she's there on the front seat with me because every time we come within 15 minutes of a place to eat, Kelly puts a new face on.

The only real good luck we have had so far is when she cracked her compact mirror. Now she sees four faces and doesn't know which one to believe. When we left Warm Springs, Georgia, we were laughing about the lady who runs the motel.

I had phoned her from 200 miles south to reserve a room, and she said: "Well, I should ask for a deposit." When we reached the place, I asked if we could have coffee served in the room and she said no. I asked if she could awaken us at 10 a.m. and she said no.

She must have felt sorry for me, because she handed me an alarm clock the size of a briefcase. Like a nut, I took it. When we got to Room 11, it ticked like a time bomb. I took it to the bathroom, buried it under damp towels, shut the door, and we could still hear it.

In Washington, we stopped to see Louise Hackmeister, who used to be the White House Chief Operator. Hackie says she's bordering on 80, but looks like 55. Commander William Rigdon, USN retired, who was FDR's personal secretary at Yalta and other places, spent the evening talking of better days.

Ben Cohen, who was once a member of the White House Brain Trust, lives alone with a Yorkshire terrier. Howard Anderson, former member of the Secret Service, is an ascetic scholar who remembers the days when the Presidential special stopped at a town called Allamuchy while FDR paid a visit to Lucy Mercer Rutherfurd who was, perhaps, his true love.

In the capital, we always stay at the old Washington Hotel. The last time, the building caught fire in the middle of the night. All the guests were in the lobby in robes, except Speaker of the House McCormack and his Harriet. The operator phoned him and he got out of bed and muttered:

"When the fire reaches this floor, call us again. Good night." This time, the fire bells went off at 1 a.m. We got out of bed. I slammed my lower bridge into my mouth, grabbed a briefcase full of research, and forgot my wife.

By the time I got to the lobby, I was in a red robe with a briefcase, and a grim spouse behind me. It was a false alarm. The wires were short-circuited. So we went back up and I did an hour of penance explaining why a husband would remember his two-bit research and forget his wife. It was most unconvincing.

Then, off to New Jersey to see the Charles Frechettes, the James Hughes—(Kelly's sister Janet)— and the Gene Krolls. Ginny and Charlie now have eight children (ages 13 to zero), and use a Ford bus. I mean a real bus.

The new baby, Kelly, is four months of age, a fat eater with blonde wispy hair. Grandma held her, was granted the gummy grin, and the kid fell asleep. We saw Jimmy and Kevin play football in the mud—they did well as I verged on pneumonia, cheering hoarsely.

The twins, Robin and Pamela, are blonde 13-year-olds and appear to be about 5 feet 6. A shyness has overcome them, but this is not true of Amy, 5, who faked me into believing that she could read an entire Dr. Seuss book. She had it committed to memory. Chris, Chipper and the dog wander around with a yard of tongue out, looming for fresh action.

Their father is a lieutenant in the First Aid Squad, only because his kids need the ambulance more frequently than any other family. Ginny is a thick shock of brown hair, the same intelligent smiling face, and a vital interest in everything in the world—in spite of the orphanage around her.

We saw the Hughes boys' new sailboat, ate too much, evicted the Krolls from their master bedroom, and hurried on to New York. There we stayed at the Plaza. In the morning, my cough sounded as though I had one-eighth of one lung left.

My world was shattered, the girls at home kept assuring us that everything was "okay" and my wife got herself locked in a bathroom full of steam. I put on my red bathrobe, got my research, and was prepared to hustle for the lobby. "You do," she hollered through the door, "and I'll kill you with my bare hands."

That left one option. I hit the bathroom door with the briefcase and it opened. "You tried to hit me," she said. Everybody should take a tour in an automobile.....

THE PENNSYLVANIA STORY

The Whipping Boys

By Mason Denison

Call Of The Wild—When members of the State House of Representatives returned to Capitol Hill this week for a one-day stand to consider the Senate-revised unemployment compensation bill (the Senate continued in recess), their reaction to the freeze on their $300-a-month expense increase decreed by the Office of Emergency Preparedness wasn't exactly a glorious one.

Chafed one lawmaker, who undoubtedly expressed the reaction of many of the brethren of the legislative round-table:

"I've said many times that we lawmakers were the whipping boys—and by golly we've been whipped on this one!"

(This columnist's "oh pshaw and fiddlesticks" didn't seem to help much, by the way.)

An aide to Governor Shapp cluck-clucked a bit and said His Excellency felt the expense increase payments "are justified" but said the Commonwealth would abide by the OEP ruling (which incidentally will save taxpayers an estimated $302,000).

The "justification" is interesting though:

After all, the President's wage-price-rent freeze order was issued August 15—and His Excellency didn't sign the expense increase legislation until August 31.

Say Again Please, Senator?—Unquestionably what Pennsylvania's citizenry needs is more "unfair" utility rate increases!

Of course that isn't what the good Senator from Philadelphia meant—but that's the inference that could indeed be drawn from a statement issued by Senator Freeman Hankins in calling on the Public Utility Commission to end the taxicab monopoly held by one company in the City of Brotherly Love.

The Quaker City Democrat was pointing up the lousy taxi service in his village which he blamed on a single cab company in operation without competition, and opined in his statement:

"Rather than approve fair increases... I would hope that the PUC would begin to look into the prospect of establishing a competitive service or services."

If the PUC shouldn't approve "fair" increases then it would seem that in the good Senator's opinion "unfair" rate increases should be the order of the day!

Of course, "fair" should have been spelled "fare"—in all "fareness" to the Senator from Philadelphia.

School Bus Circuit—Transportation of pupils attending public schools has shown an increase but the number of nonpublic pupils transported via the public school bus route has decreased, according to a report by the State Department of Education in comparing the school year 1970-71 with school year 1969-70.

For example, during the year's span, public pupils hauled via the orange school bus route climbed from 1,229,400 to 1,260,946, while nonpublic pupils transported dropped from 83,625 to 78,460.

What did all this school transportation cost taxpayers of the Keystone State?

Total busing cost climbed from $70,444,219 in the 1969-70 school year to $78,230,616 in 1970-71, and as might be expected it cost more to transport each individual pupil, the cost factor increasing in this case from $53.65 per pupil in 1969-70 to $58.41 in the 1970-71 school year.

Axiomatically perhaps, the number of school buses in use in districts throughout the state increase, rising from 13,471 to 14,112.

Hair On The Potomac

By Russell Baker

WASHINGTON—Toughness. Yes, toughness. That is what we admire here. Here in Washington. The Nation's capital, baby, and don't you forget it.

Note the iron-fisted quality of that opening paragraph, for example. Its trip-hammer power. Its bluntness. Its utter lack of grace. Five periods in a mere twenty-one words. It is a paragraph with hair on its chest. Hair all over its face. A tough Washington paragraph.

In Washington, of course, we don't talk in paragraphs as tough as that.

No sir.

When we talk in Washington, we like to let on that we're a bunch of pussyfooters. "Oh, yes, good citizens," we say, "we shall implement that for you just as soon as the input process of the game plan has received maximized minimunization at the subcabinet interagency cosmolunatic review level, with the provisio that coordination has been fully internalized in consonance with the effluvium plug."

You see the point. Pussyfoot talk shows that we are cool, contained, and don't know what we are talking about.

But underneath all the syllables, we are thinking in tough paragraphs.

Tough.

Paragraphs.

The kind of tough paragraphs that only the truly tough-minded can think in for longer than three rounds without collapsing in mental exhaustion. Because we are nothing here if not tough-minded.

Some people will tell you we are too tough-minded here in Washington. They don't like the way our tough minds shoot first and asks questions later. These people are flabby-minded.

They say our tough minds should leave the gun in the holster and sit around quietly coddling this and that, and then maybe shoot later but only if the coddling doesn't pacify the object of our gunfire.

Thank fifty years of cowboy movies, we aren't going to listen to that kind of talk. Not us. We say the time to ask questions is when there's nobody left to disagree with our answers.

The only reason we can say that is because of our toughness. It isn't easy to tell some big creep you're going to blow up the whole world unless he's out of Cuba by sundown, but it's a lot of fun if you like playing games in which everybody can get killed. Provided you're tough. And have a hard nose.

Flabby-minded people are permissible, of course, because it takes minds in all sort of physical condition, including run-down and easily winded, to make up a country. Nobody in his right tough mind, however, wants flabby-minded people in Washington.

Flabby-minded people are sissies.

They are soft-nosed.

They are coddlers.

They come back without the coonskin.

They would let the country become a pitiful helpless giant.

They would let a rat get away with the bacon rather than stand on principle and blow up the smokehouse, burn down the farm and defoliate the corn crop.

And after that happened, pretty soon rats everywhere would be saying, "America is no longer number one. America has become number two."

America is playing in a tough league. A league getting tougher every year. Keeping America number one requires men tough enough to mousetrap the Yen, fake the Chinas out of the U.N., bribe the scorekeeper in Saigon, throw the bomb against the North Vietnamese and jail or shoot anybody in the stadium who boos the game plan.

Sounds mean, doesn't it? That's because it is mean. It's got to be mean. Because toughness is what it takes here in Washington. Where the name of the game is Machismo.

That's Machismo, baby. Never forget it.

And wipe that smile off your face. Pronto!

The Money Men

By William V. Shannon

WASHINGTON —As presently organized, the House of Representatives is insufficiently responsive to the urban and social needs of the nation. Its seniority system and committee structure are forces for the status quo and a constant drag on progressive reform. They work more in behalf of the interests and conservative attitudes of rural and small town Americans than of the interests and opinions of the cities and their suburbs where the majority of Americans live.

The Appropriations Committee is at the center of this maldistribution of power. With 55 members—33 Democrats and 22 Republicans—it has only two women members and one black. Six of the seven senior Democrats are from the rural South. The exception is Brooklyn's gift to the State Department, Rep. John Rooney. As a result, eight of the 13 subcommittees are chaired by conservatives from Southern and border states. The effects of this regional distortion on national policy are far reaching.

Congress enacts programs and the President signs them into law, but it is the Appropriations Committee which determines how much money is actually going to be spent. In the House, each appropriations subcommittee has eight or ten members. Since the full committee usually follows the recommendation of its subcommittee which in turn tends to follow the lead of its chairman, these 13 subcommittee chairmen have substantial power. They are the money men. Presidents, top officials, and other congressmen lobby them for favors and support.

Stories of the arbitrariness of these appropriations subcommittee chairmen are part of the legend of the House. President Kennedy entertained Rep. Rooney in Palm Beach in a largely unsuccessful effort to persuade Rooney to provide adequate entertainment and expense allowances for American ambassadors overseas. Rep. William Natcher of Kentucky has for years held up funds for building a subway in the District of Columbia and refuses even to grant interviews to the Washington newspapers.

Rep. Otto Passman of Louisiana has made himself a byword for his opposition to foreign aid while the late Albert Thomas of Texas was for years the scourge of the public housing program.

Until his death at 85 in 1964, Clarence Cannon of Missouri was chairman of House Appropriations for nearly a quarter-century. As his fellow Missourian Richard Bolling once wrote, the grumpy Cannon "brought to his job the air of a man smelling a rotten egg."

Carl Albert, the present Speaker of the House, has told of the time he once incurred Cannon's displeasure. Cannon retaliated by eliminating money for six projects that were to be built in Albert's district.

"Fortunately for me, Senator Kerr of Olahoma was on the Senate Appropriations Committee. I appealed to him and he held up the bill in conference until Cannon relented. Otherwise, I don't know what I would have done," Albert recalled later.

Rep. George Mahon, the tall, friendly Texan who replaced Cannon is far less authoritarian and a natural conciliator but he, too, is a firm fiscal conservative.

Still chairman of the Defense Appropriations Subcommittee as well as the full committee, Mahon believes the nation has no choice except to maintain a high level of military spending. He frankly advocates holding down expenditures on social programs and urges the earliest possible return to a balanced budget.

"I know we have unmet social needs," he remarked the other day.

"I am not opposed to spending more money in the ghettos and for education and health and cleaning up the Potomac and so on, but we can't spend money we don't have. We ought not to spend money unless we have it in hand or we have it in sight."

But what is an essential program? On Wednesday, the House approved a money bill providing $352 million for the Bureau of Reclamation and $1.4 billion for the rivers and harbors projects of the Army Corps of Engineers. A congressman from a big city slum might well think there are more urgent human needs than opening up the Yazoo backwater or channeling the Tombigbee River.

Weary of fighting for social programs only to see them, once enacted, undercut by conservative money men, congressional liberals sometimes dream of returning to the arrangement which once existed in the House. For many years, major legislative committees had the authority to appropriate money for the programs which they authorized. It was only in the Budget and Accounting Act of 1920 which set up the Budget Bureau that all power to appropriate money was concentrated in this one committee.

Nothing would more invigorate the House than the consolidation of the existing 20 committees into nine or ten each with the power to appropriate money for its own programs. But conservatives who frankly like the idea of having two chances to defeat a program—once in the Legislative Committee and then in the Appropriations Committee—can be counted upon to resist this idea even more vigorously than they have fought reform of the Rules Committee.

Airline Lists August Profits

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Allegheny Airlines today reported August net earnings of $404,000, an increase of 41 per cent compared with $286,000 for the same month last year.

Total revenues increased 14 per cent to $15,787,000 in August compared with $13,843,000 for August 1970. Public service revenue (subsidy) for the month was reduced by 38 per cent to $85,000.

For the year to date a net loss of $1,743,000 was posted on total revenues of $115,598,000 compared with a net profit of $2,839,000 on total revenues of $101,675,000 for the first eight months of 1970.

Contract Let For Hatch Run

The contract for construction of the Hatch Run rd. project was executed Sept. 17 to A.E. O'Block of Pittsburgh, according to Jacob G. Kassab, secretary of transportation.

Cost of the 5.37 miles of roadwork, which includes two prestressed concrete bridges is $1,456,346.75.

A spokesman for the Franklin office of PennDOT said earlier this month that work on the project should begin on or before Oct. 1.

PITTSBURGH (AP) (USDA) — Egg (prices to retailers) market generally steady, demand irregular, supplies of jumbo and extra large sizes are well cleared with other sizes adequate to ample.

Prices Still Lower; Trading Moderate

NEW YORK (AP) — Although the selling pressure that materialized in the previous session nearly dried up, stock market prices still closed slightly lower Thursday. Trading was moderate.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, which had tumbled 9.85 Wednesday, slipped 2.27 to close at 891.28. Declines on the New York Stock Exchanges led advances by 8 to 5.

Bargain-hunting in issues depressed by the slide Wednesday and early Thursday helped give a more robust tone to the market, analysts said.

The selling pressure that developed in the previous session spilled over into Thursday's session at the outset, when the Dow industrial average was off more than 3½ points and declines led advances by 3 to 1.

"Then the bargain-hunters got inspired, and the selling dried up," remarked Bache & Co. analyst Larry Wachtel.

Analysts said the major market depressant continued to be uncertainty over the second phase of the Nixon administration's anti-inflationary program.

Some investors, they said, remained on the sidelines, hoping that President Nixon's question-and-answer session on the economy Thursday night would provide clues to the contents of the second-phase program.

Big Board volume declined to 13.27 million shares from 14.25 million shares Wednesday.

The most-active Big Board issue was Bunker Ramo, off ½ at 8⅛ on a volume of 303,600 shares. The stock closed off 1⅜ Wednesday. Brokers linked the drop to IBM's entry into computer-based stock quotation systems. IBM, which rose 2¼ Wednesday, closed off 2¾ at 305.

Farm implements and mail order and retail were lower. Motors were higher. All other groups were mixed.

Of the 1,658 issues traded on the Big Board, 810 declined and 520 advanced. New yearly lows were reached by 64 issues and new highs by 11.

The New York Stock Exchange index of some 1,300 common stocks slipped 0.05 to 54.37. The American Stock Exchange index dipped .02 to 25.32.

Dragons Take 100-Mile Trek To Meet New League Foe Greenville

By DENNY BONAVITA

Facing several "firsts" tonight, Warren High's 1-1 gridders take the long bus ride to Greenville for a meeting with the 2-0 Trojans, currently sitting atop the Western Division of the Northwest Football Conference.

The game will be Warren's first away contest this season, its first night game of 1971 and the first time in the memory of most fans that the Dragons have tested Greenville.

To prepare, WAHS coach Toby Shea and his charges switched their Thursday practice from the high school in the afternoon to Betts Memorial Field at night, getting in a few hours' work under the lights.

"I think it helped us," said Shea, who indicated Wednesday night at the Warren Sports Boosters meeting that he expected a strong game from Greenville, which he described as a power-running team that is well-coached and that executes its plays well.

Shea noted then that he was pleased with the way the Dragons hit the opposition in last Saturday's 33-8 win over Corry, and said that Warren would have to do more of the same tonight to get past the Trojans.

No changes are planned in Warren's starting lineup, with linebacker Leo English, out for at least three weeks, the only definite casualty. That leaves a backfield of sophomore Rob Young at quarterback and juniors Tom Bright and Dave Tannler and senior Jim Stromdahl at running backs. Andy Lucks will center, while Pete Salerno and Dave Dunn are at guard, Fred Martin and Chris Sirianni at tackle, Jeff Myers and Mike Piehuta at split end, and Dan Trubic and Dave Mervine at tight end. "We've been more of a running team than a passing team for the past 28 years," said third-year Greenville head coach Bob Ballock on Thursday. "We mix it up, though, running just about anywhere—inside or outside."

He lists senior Mike McGonigal as his quarterback with junior Steve Ballock, his son, as a backup. Fullback Dave Oliver at 185 pounds has been the Trojans' power runner, and Bill Shimshock, regarded as a potent threat, is back from an injury at left half, teaming with Doug Weaver at right half. Juniors Don Thompson and Doug Spurlock will also see backfield action, said Ballock.

He lists 185-pound senior Skip Keller and 175-pound senior Tom Bendig as starting tackles, with 170 pound Earl Butterfield and 160 pound Wayne Schwartzbeck at guards, spelled by soph 155-pounder Lonnie Frye and 160 pound Mike Stull at center.

Greenville plays a basic 5-2-4 "monster" defense, he added and runs out of a slot offense or a fullback flanker formation.

Fans going to the game can reach Stewart field from Route 358 via Sandy Lake by noting a railroad trestle overpass just as they enter Greenville and turning left at the first road past it. Keep going for three blocks, the road turns right and one block later, fans should take a left turn to get to the school.

Game time is set for 8 p.m.

VALLEY VIEW

Optimism plays a very essential role in building esprit de corps on a football team. But optimism is a very strange and, if not handled in moderate doses, dangerous instrument.

A very thin line stretches between optimism and over-confidence. Warning signals, if gone unnoticed, lead, sometimes, into inflated and easily punctured egos.

Eisenhower is on the threshold of what could be its best football season since Jack Norton, now an assistant Knight coach, and Ross Porter were guiding the Blue and Gold successes in the early 1960s.

After an easily handled Clymer, N.Y. team left Ike's backyard workshop Saturday afternoon whimpering from a 13-0 loss to a defensive-minded Knight lot, Ike was left to talk about its offensive running game, defensive stamina, and possibilities in the Valley Conference.

There's nothing like an opening conquest to instill confidence and make pre-season labor pains nothing more than a formality. I'm not saying that Eisenhower hinges on the border line of overconfidence or hypoed optimism, however; I'm just reiterating what a wise old coach of mine stressed when success descended upon us. Lay your wins aside, they're nice to leaf back through in the scrapbook someday. There's more work ahead.

Reminiscent of overconfidence is Youngsville's substantial loss to Townville in '70 after the Eagles failed to listen to the pleas of Coach Jerry Novelli, who forewarned of the less-publicized offense in the lurking foe. A 6-0 record and a sachel of points had lulled the Eagles into believing a fabricated falsehood—indestructibility.

Coach Tom Firth, I know, believes in looking at each game on a week-by-week basis, no sooner. He's been around too long to believe otherwise. Too many lean years have crossed his path to let instant or a promise of future success spoil his beliefs.

In all likelihood, Pine Valley, N.Y., a what-looks-to-be doormat in the Valley Conference, should feel the punitive crunch of Ike's controlled talent nearly two-fold than Clymer did last week. Reasons:

—More Knight talent is eligible to play this game under the New York State athletic rules.

The Panthers were unable to sustain a worthy drive against Cuba, N.Y.

Their defense gave up nearly 335 grounds on the grass and over 410 yards altogether.

Actually, when pre-season questionnaires were sent to Valley Conference coaches concerning the league's possible status this campaign, many of them didn't list Eisenhower as a serious threat. They named Maple Grove, Silver Creek, Randolph, Westfield, and, imagine, Pine Valley as top choices.

Maple Grove, last year's title holder, is the most popular choice of the queried pilots. Despite internal problems and an overhauling in the school's coaching alignment, the Dragons return with Kim Wefing, the league's leading scorer, with 92 points last fall. Joining fullback Wefing in the backfield is Tim Gribbin, honorable mention on the all-star 1970 team, at left half. Converted half-back Bill Smith makes a switch from guard. Apparently the transition hasn't been appalling, he scored once and ran with know-how in the 26-6 breeze over Ellicottville, the Dragon opener. As a matter of fact, Wefing and Gribbin scored too.

Minus Mike Hubbard, Randolph's Mr. Everything on the gridiron for the past three years, the Cards return with eight letter-winners, five of whom saw considerable action in '70. Quarterback Mike Leahy, a slippery mite of a field general, has returned to a backfield that moves with Dave Wheeler at the half, the only journeyman runner on the 24-man team.

Randolph will be a relatively small 11 in stature, and as eighth-year coach Paul Hvizdzak says "light ... but quick." In their first exam, the Cardinals passed with above-average grades in stretching the yardstick nearly 300 yards in a 31-12 slaughter of Forestville's hapless Hornets.

Westfield is big, very big, the line, itself, averages 200 pounds or better, standing nearly 6-1 from end to end. Two of the lineman range between 230 and 275 pounds. Fairly big, huh!

Doug Peck, a converted quarterback from halfback out of sheer necessity in 1970, heads a backfield that includes Tom Scarpine, a Valley Conference All-Star in 1969, who scored 30 points last year in a mediocre 4-4 Wolverine season—one that resembled a rolly coaster with its ups and downs.

Already the picture is brighter for the Wolverines. Scarpine and halfaback Jeff Corcoran, a wing-back who gained 180 yards rushing over Brocton last year, scored in a 16-0 victory over Panama Saturday afternoon.

Silver Creek has the equipment available to upset the defending champs. Dennis Cartwright, an accomplished south-paw quarterback, will handle a bevy of starters from a 3-2-2 record in '70. The free-wheeling passer tossed 135 times last year with results—855 yards and a 44 percent completion average. He can run too, picking up about 180 yards.

The all-star quarterback has an all-star receiver in 6-1, 175 lb. Bill Srock at end, together they should make sweet touchdown music for the Knights. Scatbacks Sam Allen and Harry McGowan, 155 pounders, are exceptionally speedy, with one other important asset from Cartwright's angle—sure hands.

Statistically, Silver Creek missed a perfect 1970 autumn by six points. The two ties—Cassadaga Valley and Randolph—and a four-point loss to Eisenhower and two-point setback by Maple Grove were the only deficiencies on a team that had only two experienced men.

Cassadaga Valley is undergoing redeveloping after a high toll paid at graduation in the spring; but Coach Joe Annarella has been known to throw out everything but the kitchen sink, a reserve item, to get a winning season. He lost his first to Franklinville, 40-6, but a 80-44-4 lifetime chart indicates that he doesn't remain in the losers' column long.

Brocton, a junior blessed club, may be a year away from football fortunes.

It's plain to see that the Valley Conference isn't going to be decided on the drawing board, nor the locker room or practice sessions, but where it counts—on the gridiron—the battlefield.

There's no room for overconfidence in the Valley Conference is there?

'Frisco Moves In West

HOUSTON (AP) — Gaylord Perry fired a three-hitter and Willie McCovey drove in both runs as the San Francisco Giants stopped the Houston Astros 2-1 Thursday night and opened a three-game lead in the National League West race.

The Giants, boosting their margin over the idle Los Angeles Dodgers to the biggest since Sept. 12, reduced their title-winning magic number to four. Each team has six games remaining.

McCovey led off the fourth inning with a solo home run over the 390-foot sign in right field, his 18th, to give the Giants a 1-0 edge off Astros pitcher Don Wilson, who entered the game with five straight victories.

Consecutive line drive singles up the middle by Perry and center fielder Ken Henderson and an error by Astro third baseman Denis Menke got Wilson in trouble with the bases loaded in the fifth inning.

Wilson then hit McCovey with a pitch to walk home the Giants' second run.

It was the second victory in a row for the Giants, who started the three-game series against the Astros with 12 defeats in their last 15 games.

Perry, 15-12, never was in trouble in posting his first victory this season over the Astros in four appearances. Perry struck out six and walked only one.

In taking the loss, Wilson, 16-9, held the Giants to seven hits before leaving for a pinch hitter in the bottom of the eighth inning. He struck out nine batters and yielded one walk. Wilson had won 10 of his last 11 games.

Astros second baseman Joe Morgan hit safely for his 16th straight game in the fourth when he blasted a double.

The Giants now move to Cincinnati for a three-game series beginning Friday. They close out the season with three games at San Diego.

P-P-K Competition Set For Saturday

All boys aged eight through 13 who have not yet registered for Saturday's annual Punt-Pass-and-Kick Contest sponsored by the Ford Motor Co. and Midtown Motors are reminded to do so today by stopping at Midtown Motors with a parent or guardian. The contest, which will be run Saturday morning on Beaty Field, pits youngsters in a test of skill and accuracy against opponents in their own age groups. Last year, Joe Wozneak of Warren advanced to the semi-finals of the contest, winning a trip to the west coast in the process.

The Warren Jaycees will assist with the project this year by providing manpower and measuring personnel. There is no charge for the contest, and local winners will receive trophies for first, second and third places.

BOWLING

Perrin Just Behind Myer Pappalardo

Switching lanes doesn't seem to bother veteran bowler Chuck Perrin. He led the men Wednesday at Riverside Lanes and lined a splashy 265 single to place second overall Thursday with a 595 series at Sugar Bowl.

Myer Pappalardo's high single wasn't as bid—244—but his consistency gave him a solid 646 series in Riverside's National Forge league. John Pick at 223-607 in Penn's Commercial League and George Skinner at 233 in the Forge Loop and Jack Colvin at 238 in the Pennsylvania Gas Co. league were the other shining lights for the men.

Fran Skelley had the field all to herself in ladies' action, working a 177 to a 501 series on Bowladrome's difficult lanes.

'Wrinkles And Gray Hairs' Heritage Of Racer Leonard

By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Special Correspondent

NEW YORK (AP) — Auto racer Joe Leonard shoots for the national driving championship in the Marlboro 300 at the Trenton, (N.J.) Speedway Sunday, and that means more wrinkles in his leathery face and more flecks of gray in his thick, coal-black hair.

"Wrinkles and gray hairs—that's our heritage," the 37-year-old railroad engineer's son from San Jose, Calif., said Thursday. "We race drivers get old well before our time. Look at me—people think I'm 50."

It isn't entirely true, but Leonard, who has been flirting with death since he was 17, shows the scars and winkles of anxiety from 10 years of motorcycle racing, 1951-61, that preceded his jump into big time automobile racing.

Leonard can clinch the season's driving title with a victory in the Trenton race, the 10th in the 11-event Marlboro series that closes with the Bobby Ball 150 at Phoenix, Ariz., Oct. 15. Currently, he holds a 350-point lead over his stablemate on the Parnelli Jones team, Al Unser, defending driving champ.

"When I went into auto racing, I set a goal for myself," Leonard said. "I determined to win the Indianapolis 500 and then retire at the age of 40. If I win the Indy before I'm 40, I'll finish the year and hang it up. If I don't win, I'll quit at 40 anyway."

Leonard, a strapping, handsome man with a worried face, left home at the age of 15, worked in a filling station for nickels and dimes, learned to lay hardwood floors and began motorcycle racing at the age of 17. He was four times national motorcycle champion.

"There is no question about which is the more dangerous sport," the Californian said. "It is auto racing.

"I once was thrown off a motorcycle at 110 miles an hour and I suffered only a broken shoulder and busted leg. I was back on the wheels in no time.

"Auto racing? It's like a guillotine hanging over you all the time, but you can't afford to be afraid. You should be aware and apprehensive, sure. But scared? Forget it. If you're ever scared, don't race."

Leonard has walked away from two serious accidents. In 1965, he was in the middle of a flameup at Langhorne, Pa., pulling Mel Kenyon out of a burning car. He barely got out alive when his car hit a concrete wall at better than 100 m.p.h. at Handford, Calif., in 1968.

"In a racing car you are crammed into a tight space," the driver said. "The car is bulky and heavy. You are going at break-neck speed. You must concentrate every second. The least lapse could be disastrous.

"Fire is what we are most concerned about. We carry 75 gallons of highly inflammable fluid. The driver wears two pairs of thermal long johns and two layers of overalls. Temperature gets to 132 degrees.

"If you have an accident and the car catches fire, you have 15 seconds to get out. If you don't make it, you're baked like a potato."

It was Leonard who drove Andy Grantelli's turbine car in the 1968 Indianapolis 500, setting a one lap mark of 171.953 MPH and leading with nine laps to go before the car ground to a stop. On Sept. 5 he won the Ontario 500.

Already this season he has won $219,000.

The Marlboro driving award would bring him another $35,000.

"Better than motorcycle racing," he said. "The most I ever won in motorcycle racing was $13,000 a year."

Stargell Clobbers No. 46 As Pirates Blank Cardinals

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Willie Stargell keyed a 12-hit attack with his 46th home run and Nelson Briles pitched a six-hitter, leading the Pittsburgh Pirates to a 5-0 victory over the St. Louis Cardinals Thursday night.

Stargell, whose shot tied the Atlanta Braves' Hank Aaron for the home run lead in the National League, delivered with teammate Vic Davalillo on base in the fifth inning.

The 420-foot line drive boosted Pittsburgh's lead to 4-0 against Cardinals right-hander Reggie Cleveland, 12-12, who departed after being rattled for three more singles and the Pirates' other run in the same inning.

Briles didn't walk a batter and struck out three enroute to his eighth victory in 12 decisions.

Tidioute Blasted By North Clarion

Suffering from a defense as porous as a pine tree in a thunderstorm, Tidioute High's baseball team fell to a charged-up North Clarion nine 12-0 in Thursday's Upper Allegheny Valley League action. East Forest increased its record to 2-1 with an 11-5 stomping of Spartansburg in the league's other contest.

"Errors and walks; walks and errors," moaned THS coach Jim Scalise in recounting the repeated rallies that punched North Clarion to its big lead. The hosts started off in the first inning with five runs, coming on two singles, two walks and two errors, then pushed across three more in the second inning to put the game out of reach.

Tidioute yielded seven walks and nine errors in the contest.

The Bulldogs came closest to scoring in the third inning when they loaded the bases, but a strikeout ended the inning.

Leroy Shick and Randy Renton tagged back-to-back doubles to open East Forest's ten-run second inning after Sparta had taken a 1-0 lead in the first. Four singles and an error brought Tom Mortimer up, and he and Larry DeKort doubled back-to-back as well before Mike Gatesman tripled to plate the last of the ten Bears' runs in that inning.

Winning pitcher Barry Chandler scattered four hits and struck out nine. Sparta's R. Allen and Rote had two singles apiece in the contest.

West Forest is at Tidioute and East Forest is at North Clarion on Monday.

Phils Tip Expos

MONTREAL (AP)— Greg Luzinski's two-run single in the ninth inning scored the tying and winning runs as the Philadelphia Phillies rallied for four runs and a 6-4 victory over Montreal Thursday.

Held to three hits by Ernie McAnally and trailing 4-2 going into the ninth, the Phillies loaded the bases on walks to Larry Bowa and Deron Johnson around a single by Mike Anderson.

Deron Johnson drew a walk, forcing in one run, before Luzinski stroked a two-run single up the middle. Bob Bailey's throwing error let in the Phillies final run.

Rozelle Fights Alimony Claim

NEW YORK (AP) — Pete Rozelle, commissioner of the National Football League, resisted a request Thursday for $75,000 alimony by his wife, Marilyn, from whom he is seeking a divorce in Manhattan Supreme Court.

Through his attorney, Mark Alcott, Rozelle contended that although under the terms of a separation agreement on Nov. 20, 1968, he was obliged to pay his $16,200 annually.

Mets End Jinks With 5-4 Win

CHICAGO (AP) — Bob Aspromonte's two-run, tie-breaking single in the eighth inning carried the New York Mets to a 5-4 victory over Chicago Thursday, snapping the Cubs' string of six straight victories over the Mets.

Rookie Leroy Stanton launched the winning rally with a single. Cleon Jones also singled and Tommie Agee walked filling the ases. Aspromonte followed breaking a 3-3 deadlock.

Nolan Ryan, overcoming early control trouble, posted his 10th triumph. He has lost 13.

Dragon Game To Be Aired

Radio Station WRRN, reversing an earlier decision, will broadcast tonight's Warren High-Greenville High football game, a station spokesman said Thursday. Game time will be 8 p.m.

The station had planned earlier in the week to air the Pittsburgh Pirates game, but changed its schedule to accommodate Dragon fans when the Pirates secured the NL East Division crown Wednesday night.

Franklin's Frosh Upend Beaty

Just about reversing the performance of the varsity in last Saturday's game, Beaty Junior High's gridders absorbed their first loss in three seasons at Franklin Thursday, falling by an 18-6 count to the Franklin Squires.

Tom Pellegrino broke open a fourth-quarter kickoff return for a 75-yard scamper and Beaty's only score, but it wasn't enough to offset three Franklin touchdowns.

The first one came in the first quarter when Franklin recovered a Beaty fumble after Beaty's Bruce Ahlquist had fallen on one of theirs and Beaty drove to the Franklin ten, only to be set back by two consecutive 15-yard penalties. Franklin took over on its 40, and on second down connected on an over-the-middle pass and 40-yard run play for a 6-0 lead that stood up until halftime.

Franklin blocked a Beaty punt to take over on Beaty's 30 at the top of the fourth quarter and, after a penalty against Beaty put the ball on the 15, punched out a three-play scoring drive, the TD coming on a nine-yard drive up the middle.

Pellegrino then staged his runback, but the remainder of the game was a comedy of fumbles, with Gregg Wozneak, Steve Snyder and Rod Baker recovering Franklin bobbles and the Squires getting a Beaty fumble and an interception. The theft gave them the ball on Beaty's 40, and on a fourth-and-six from the 39, Franklin sent a runner up the middle and all the way for the touchdown.

Beaty fumbled six times and Franklin four times in the game.

Beaty hosts Bradford on Thursday at 4 p.m.

Sheffield Frosh Fall By 20-8

Despite an 80-yard screen pass play from Kevin French to Paul Champion for a touchdown, Sheffield's junior high gridders lost a 20-8 decision to Coudersport Thursday. Russell of Coudersport scored all three TDs and the extra points on runs of 20, 45 and one yard.

PRO FOOTBALL PICKS

Scores Should Return To Normal

By BRUCE LOWITT
Associated Press Sports Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Was it a fluke or a prelude?

Whatever you choose to call it, last Sunday's opening day in the National Football League was one of the wildest in history as underdogs flexed their muscles, throwing the preseason prognosticators into a frenzy.

From this vantage point, it seems that things are bound to settle down. There will, of course, still be upsets every weekend—and that includes an occasional Monday night—but nothing to compare to the wild inaugurals.

So, plunging ahead fearlessly despite a one-week record of 4-8—throwing out the Miami-Denver tie—this forecaster sees a back-to-normal outcome in this weekend's 13 games—with the exception of the collisions in New England and Baltimore.

New England 21, Detroit 16: The Lions' usually solid defense will stop the Patriots on the ground, but it'll have to get to quarterback Jim Plunkett to shut down the aroused New Englanders, who should be able to neutralize Detroit passer Greg Landry.

Cleveland 20, Baltimore 17: Bill Nelsen's short-range sharpshooting should keep the Colts off balance while the Browns' defense goes after an unsteady Earl Morrall. Cleveland's coverage of the Baltimore ground attack will be the difference.

Los Angeles 24, Atlanta 14: The Falcons have nevec beaten the Rams in nine previous encounters and this will be no different. The Los Angeles lines will control the game, the defense keeping quarterback Bob Berry on the run while the offensive line gives Rom Gabriel time to pick apart the Atlanta secondary.

Minnesota 23, Chicago 10: The Vikings are hardly a clumsy crew— and it was butterfingered Pittsburgh that enabled the Bears to win their opener. Chicago's defense will crumble before Minnesota's power.

Cincinnati 31, Pittsburgh 13: Virgil Carter will be the whole show, decimating the Steelers' pass defense while the Bengals' defense keys on Pittsburgh running back John Fuqua and chases down quarterback Terry Bradshaw.

Dallas 42, Philadelphia 17: And that's being charitable. the Cowboys' divergent attack, with Calvin Hill on the ground and either Craig Morton or Roger Staubach at the helm, will clip the helpless Eagles' wings early.

Green Bay 27, Denver 13: Rest assured that the Pack won't fumble twice in its own end zone two times the rest of the season—and that's what beat them last Sunday against the New York Giants. Green Bay and Denver each have commendable defenses but the Broncos haven't a steady offense to go with theirs.

Kansas City 24, Houston 13: Again, defense will be the deciding factor, mainly the Chiefs' ability to stifle Oilers' quarterback Charley Johnson. Look for Kansas City passer Len Dawson to give Houston's short pass defense a thorough workout.

Miami 21, Buffalo 20: A squeaker, indeed. But the Dolphins' ability to go on the ground with Jim Kiick and Larry Csonka as well as through the air with Bob Griese to Paul Warfield, will outshine the Bills' one-man show, Dennis Shaw.

Oakland 24, San Diego 21: John Hadl was something else last weekend against Kansas City, but the Chargers' quarterback will be something else again this time as the Oakland defense wakes up and its usually high-powered offense moves into gear following the false start against New England.

San Francisco 27, New Orleans 20: John Brodie of the 49ers will be in one big hurry to show that his shaky performance against Atlanta was a one-time thing and San Francisco's defense will be out to show Archie Manning that one last play, game-winning touchdown doesn't make a season.

New York Giants 34, Washington 27: Both the Giants and Redskins took advantage of sloppy opposition to register upsets last Sunday. If they don't try to give the game away to each other, Fran Tarkenton will hold New York together long enough to beat Washington.

St. Louis 20, New York Jets 16: When Al Woodall doesn't move the Jets there's nowhere to go, but the Cardinals at least can choose between Jim Hart and Pete Beathard. Kickers Jim Bakken of St. Louis and Bobby Howfield of New York will have prominent roles.

Beaty Underclassmen Playing Intramural Touch Football

Conceived as a pilot program, Beaty Junior High School's intramural football league for seventh and eighth grade boys is now proceeding under the direction of Tony Scordo and Jim Lucas.

Split into two divisions, the ten-team league emphasizes fundamentals such as the proper stance, blocking and some basic plays set up by the Beaty varsity coaches, said Lucas.

Teams are eight-man squads, with either a two-hand tap or flag pullout used to make a tackle. Teams play after school according to a schedule.

67's LEAD ROBINSON PLAY

Rookie, Vet Tied Atop Golf Field

ROBINSON, Ill. (AP) — Rookie Dwight Nevil and big George Archer matched early 67's and then sat back and watched them stand up for the first-round lead Thursday in the $100,000 Robinson Open Golf Tournament.

Their four-under-par efforts put them one stroke ahead of a quartet tied at 68—Labron Harris, Larry Hinson, Mac McLendon and Jim Ferriell.

All of the leaders were early starters as a dusty afternoon wind sent late scores soaring.

Lee Trevino, the pretourney favorite and a late starter, managed only a 72, one over par on the 5,585-yard Crawford County Club course.

Trevino arrived only about an hour before his tee time and said, "My mind really wasn't on it."

His mother is seriously ill in Dallas.

"I just wasn't thinking very good," said Trevino, winner of the American, Canadian and British Opens earlier this year. He was by far the biggest gate attraction in this little community of some 7,200 population just across the Wabash River from Indiana.

Arnold Palmer, Jack Nicklaus, Gary Player and Masters champion Charles Coody all missed it for one reason or another.

There was a large group at 69, two under par and two off the pace. Among them were Bert Greene, Jim Colbert and Mike Hill, all morning starters.

J.C. Snead and Mason Rudolph, with Trevino the only members of the American Ryder Cup team that beat Great Britain last week who are competing here, each had a 73.

Defending champion George Knudson, a Canadian and a late starter, had a fat 77 and must make a major improvement if he is to survive the cut for the final two rounds when the field is trimmed at the end of Friday's round.

"That wind was tough out there," Trevino said. "I doubt if there were any good scores in the afternoon."

He was right. Only a handful of afternoon starters were able to break par and none of them made a really serious run at Nevil and Archer, both of whom played before the wind kicked up.

Nevil, a one-time Dallas fireman and now a San Antonio resident, hasn't come close to winning a major tournament in this, his first year on the pro tour. His best finish was fourth in last week's Quad Cities Open, a $25,000 satellite event.

He had four birdies and no bogies in what he called "not a very exciting round. I played pretty good and made a couple of putts."

The 6-foot-6 Archer, winner of two titles and more than $111,000 this season, opened with a rush, then cooled off.

Archer one-putted six of the first seven greens, was five under at that point—then didn't make another birdie.

Their four-under-par efforts put them one stroke ahead of a quartet tied at 68—Labron Harris, Larry Hinson, Mac McLendon and Jim Ferriell.

Congress Eyes Baseball Status

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. William B. Spont Jr., D-Va., proposed Thursday that Congress examine baseball's antitrust immunity in light of the Washington Senators' move to Texas.

"How is it that a small group of men can deprive the nation's capital of its team and decide where next to bestow the valuable franchise rights?" he said before a Senate judiciary antitrust subcommittee considering a pro basketball merger.

"The answer quite simply is that Congress has not acted to spell out the responsibility of organized baseball to the public," he said. "This silence has been construed by the courts as a positive intent to exempt baseball from the laws which affect other professional sports and other big businesses."

Since the 1922 Supreme Court decision exempting baseball from antitrust laws, Spong said, "the character of baseball has radically changed...today it is clearly involved in interstate commerce."

"The time has come in the development of organized baseball for congress to protect the public interest and to review the unique immunity that baseball enjoys. Decisions which so deeply affect the public should no longer be left in the hands of a few wealthy club owners..." he said.

"I do not believe mismanagement should be rewarded," Spong added. "It is time that the interest of fans and of the sport itself be given equal weight with the interest of business."

A SHORT BASEBALL HISTORY

NEW YORK—Not too many people are aware of the fact that the course of baseball history was among the many changes that resulted from a certain Japanese impetuousity 30 years ago. The American League had scheduled a meeting in Chicago for December 8, 1941. Note the date, please. The purpose of the gathering was to give approval to the request of Don Barnes of the St. Louis Browns to move his franchise to Los Angeles.

Preliminary ground work had cleared the way. How could there be any objection? The Brownies were competing for patronage in a town dominated by the Cardinals. In 1941 the Brownies had drawn 176,240 cash customers. To the American League was poised for the first break with tradition and for the first foray to California. But at the meeting on the day after Pearl Harbor, the subject of such a franchise shift was dropped as impractical, with government restrictions on travel certain to be imposed.

Oddly enough, though, the St. Louis Browns were responsible in a lefthanded sort of way for the first switch of a franchise in half a century. It came suddenly in the spring of 1953 and involved the Boston Braves who were pushed into the move before they were ready. A definite pattern is to be found in the sequence of events.

At the time when Barnes was making ready to transfer the Brownies to California, a young whippersnapper from Chicago, Bill Veeck, had snatched from bankruptcy the minor league franchise in Milwaukee and converted it into the biggest moneymaker in the sticks. After the war he turned loose that same promotional genius on the moribund Cleveland Indians franchise and converted it into a fantastic success. He later did the same with the Chicago White Sox. But his Midas touch was lost on the St. Louis Browns, a dead turkey that not even his magic could restore to life.

By the end of the 1952 season Veeck was jostling for position and eager for a move. Convinced by his personal experiences that Milwaukee was ready for big league ball, the dynamic Veeck began making passes for the transfer of his Brownies to the Wisconsin metropolis. This alarmed Lou Perini, whose Boston Braves owned the minor league franchise in Milwaukee. He didn't dare yield the territory to Veeck because he needed to preserve it as an escape hatch for himself if the decline of the Braves in Boston continued at the same precipitate rate.

In March of 1953 Perini reluctantly shifted his Braves from Boston to Milwaukee as the only way to head off Veeck. Shortly thereafter, though, Veeck had a deal rigged to transfer the Brownies to Baltimore but Dan Topping and Del Webb of the Yankees stabbed him in the back as the American League refused permission, condemning him to a lame duck operation. After Veeck was forced to sell out, however, the league let the deal go through. Thus were the Baltimore Orioles restored to big league stature.

By 1955 the saintly Connie Mack, Baseball's Oldest Inhabitant was 93 years old and having difficulty in outrunning his creditors. So he yielded ownership in the Philadelphia Athletics which was transferred to Kansas City and later to Oakland. The Mack transaction was the last of the franchise juggles to be motivated by desperation.

Avarice was the influencing factor for those that followed. Walter O'Malley was getting rich with his Dodgers in Brooklyn but he figured he could get richer, faster in Los Angeles. So he moved and he was right. To a lesser degree Horace Stoneham did the same in switching the Giants from New York to San Francisco. But once Charlie Finley muscled into the same territory by taking his Athletics to Oakland across the bay the going got rough even with pennant winners.

Once upon a time baseball had deep and sentimental hometown roots. But the quick-buck men have taken over to a sickening degree and they cynically play a game of musical chairs, pouncing on whatever perch is attractively plastered with dollar bills. The latest is Bob Short. He's folding up his Washington Senator operation and reopening next season in a new come-on stand in the Dallas-Fort Worth area.

Maybe Washington no longer is a viable franchise. But Short never gave it a chance. He was under-financed when he took over and did a wretched job of running an over-priced operation. He arranged idiotic trades and the only notable contribution he has made to the sport was luring Ted Williams out of retirement to manage his ballclub. This is the only good mark baseball can give Short. Yet it is a big one.

It was a mite surprising that the American Leaguers would risk the wrath of Congress by permitting Short to go carpetbagging to Texas. But the Americans are now run by understanding and sympathetic men. Practically every franchise is in distress in one way or another with only the Red Sox, Tigers and Yankees over the million mark in attendance. In marked contrast, the Nationals have only one dead horse, San Diego. What the Short switch does, though, is eliminate one landing spot for baseball's next go around of musical chairs.

Mantle To Manage New Dallas Team?

DALLAS (AP) — Mickey Mantle, the former New York Yankee slugger, looked at the headlines of the Washington Senators' shift to Dallas-Fort Worth and said Thursday he would like to manage the team.

This was coupled with speculation that the Senators current manager, Red Williams, may move up to the front office.

"Heck, yes, I'd be interested in talking about managing," Mantle, a Dallas resident, said in an interview with Blackie Sherrod, executive sports editor of the Dallas Times Herald.

Savoring the idea a little more, Mantle said,"... you know, they might make my whole salary back in one series if I brought a team into Yankee Stadium to play the Yankees. And how about if I was managing a team and took it to Detroit to play Billy Martin's team? That oughta draw quite a few at the gate. It ought to be good for something."

"Of course, nobody's gotten in touch with me," added Mantle. "But I'd be open to it if the deal's right."

But before he began speculating about the Senators, Mantle discussed his loyalty to the Yankees.

"I just read that Billy Martin wanted me to coach for him in Detroit for a year before I went to managing," said Mantle, "But I think if I was still gonna coach, I'd stay with the Yankees. You know, I coached for them the last month of last season. I still do some work for them ... The Yankees have been great to me." He said he was pleased to see a Big League Baseball team in Dallas.

"I was really happy to learn we got a team," he said, "Really, I was tickled to death. I didn't think we had a chance.

Johnson Aces CVCC's No. 7

One swing of his eight iron on the 137-yard No. 7 hole at Conewango Valley Country Club sent club professional Jack Johnson's ball headed straight for the pin. Turning to playing partners Bob Kusse, Don Sims and Rocky Logan, Johnson muttered "Don't go in!"

But it did—giving Johnson his first hole-in-one in his golfing career. The ball hit above five feet short, and trickled in.

"I really hadn't even planned on playing today," said Johnson Thursday night, "but they talked me into a fast nine, and the shot just went right to the cup."

White Sox Eye AL East Berth

CHICAGO (AP) — The Chicago White Sox want to replace the Washington Senators as an Eastern Division club in the American League. The Senators' move to Dallas-Fort Worth was opposed by the White Sox.

The club sent a telegram to AL President Joe Cronin Wednesday asking to be shifted from the AL West to the East to "renew natural rivalries with such teams as the Detroit Tigers, Cleveland Indians, New York Yankees and Boston Red Sox."

The request was made only 24 hours after the AL voted 10-2, with the White Sox and Baltimore Orioles dissenting, to permit owner Bob Short to move the Senators from Washington to Dallas-Fort Worth next season.

Owner John Allyn of the White Sox said Thursday the AL owners "were grasping at straws in the move aimed at easing the Senators' serious financial plight.

"Short is convinced the Texas people will come through with anything he needs any time he needs it," commented Allyn. "He's dealing with a municipal corporation that's making all the promises.

"So they don't fix up the stadium (Turnpike Stadium at Arlington Tex.). What can he do about it? Sue a Texas municipal corporation in Texas? How far do you think he'll get trying t

These people aren't putting hard cash on the line. They sold the owners a bill of goods."

Regarding the request to have the White Sox moved into the AL East, Allyn said "Milwaukee wants into the East Division, too. But they are an expansion club, so we certainly should have a chance over them. But I don't know."

Allyn said Cronin has told him with the Chicago Cubs in the National League East, it would cause scheduling difficulties to place the White Sox in the AL East.

'Hope Inc.' First Halfway House In County

Hope Inc., the first "halfway house" in Warren county for alcoholics, has its wide door open, ready to receive its first tenants and help them back along the road to full and responsible participation in society.

Hope Inc., is established in Youngsville, at 301 East Main street, a handsome double-fronted corner brick house that until now has always been a private residence. It is across the street from Valley Rest, another recently-launched pioneer project that provides homey lodging for able but lone persons who can no longer maintain homes by themselves.

The same man is responsible for both ventures—William Bunce, who lives on the nearby corner at 247 East Main street. In addition to starting Valley Rest and Hope Inc., he had exterior improvements made to his own home this summer. Ask him how he came to "bite off" so much at one time, and he'll answer in one word: Faith.

He saw a need for the boarding house service Valley Rest provides, when he worked as a general assistant at the Warren Senior Center. It has the blessing of the county commissioners, and if successful may be a prototype for others, because it releases for the chronically ill the facilities of the Rouse Home. There are eight residents now at Valley Rest, ranging in age from 41 to 90.

Working at the Senior Center was for Mr. Bunce part of a program for solving a personal problem, in which he had the cooperation of Alcoholics Anonymous. "In AA we help ourselves by helping others." He became aware from personal experience of the need for something like Hope Inc.

With nothing but his faith to offer as security, he began looking for "angels". He found one in the Betts Foundation, which negotiated the purchase of the house. Several private individuals supplied additional capital. Some of them visited Crossroads and Serenity Hall in Erie, Pa., successful projects after which Hope Inc. will be patterned.

There are many organizations throughout the country, says 45-year-old Mr. Bunce. He will be the executive director of Hope Inc., whose name he devised. It is an acronym, he says, for "Help Other People Exist."

At present five members of Alcoholics Anonymous are conducting the business of Hope Inc., but a more broadly based board of directors is to be set up. Two local clergymen have already sat in on discussions, which began on Labor Day, and they have indicated willingness to help.

"We are going to need the help of a lot of people" says Mr. Bunce. "I expect there will be some opposition at first. People will think we are going to move a lot of drunks in here. But that is the last thing that will happen.

"We have drawn up some stiff rules and they will be rigidly enforced. I hope people will give the program a chance. Anybody can come and talk to me about it. I want everybody to understand what we will be trying to do."

Mr. Bunce describes Hope Inc. as "a halfway house between the gutter and society." The men who stay there must be in the Alcoholics Anonymous program, wanting help, and prepared to help themselves. He says:

"Too often, a man comes out of Warren State Hospital in the right frame of mind, rents a room somewhere—but with no job, no friends, no moral support, he becomes discouraged and slips back.

"If we can provide men like this with a home atmosphere, counselling, spiritual support, social contact, and help in finding a job, they have a good chance of returning to society able to function properly."

He points out that alcoholism is a disease, and its victim must take the first steps to control it. Control lasts only a day at a time; there is no cure.

That is why the rules are strict. To be admitted, a man must have gone without a drink for seven days. After admission—"one drink and you're out" says the list of "commandments" tersely.

Smoking in bed, gambling, and spending nights anywhere but at the House are also no-no's. There will be an 11 p.m. curfew Sunday through Thursday, with an extension to midnight on Fridays, Saturdays and holiday eves.

A resident manager will supervise the house. Residents may be called upon to assist with chores, and will be expected to keep their own rooms clean. They must also seek employment "promptly, diligently and persistently."

A year is the maximum time any man may stay.

They will pay $6 per day. "We'll provide everything except tobacco" says Mr. Bunce, pointing out a comfortably furnished lounge, with television, a cheerful dining room, a third floor with fine potential as a recreation room, and five bedrooms with a total capacity of ten beds.

There is also a small second floor room whose walls are a multi-colored patchwork of paper scraps. Teen-agers in the family which recently moved out called it their "hip room". Mr. Bunce wants to turn it into a meditation room.

"I am hoping churches will re-decorate and furnish it for us" he says. "It could be one of the most important rooms in the house. Anybody who wants to help can come and talk to me about it."

The center will, however, be non-denominational. He estimates it will require $1700 a month to operate—and so far he can only see a maximum income of $1550!

The county commissioners, he says, are "for us" but cannot help financially. Alcoholics Anonymous can only be "honorary sponsors". The board will apply for state funds "but that will take time". There "may be" money sources available through the Office of Economic Opportunity. Hopefully local business and industry will contribute. He reflects:

"Remember, when you have an alcoholic, you frequently not only have a sick man, but a sick family, and the family is the basis of society, so it is society's problem. At Hope the people offer companionship, renewed hope, sobriety, self-respect, clean lodgings, clean clothes, clean ideas, clean purpose.

"Men coming here seeking help, guidance, courage, faith and perseverance will find themselves guided by AA members who have walked the same dark miles. We have these private citizens and the Betts Foundation who made it possible to start. But we're going to have to get more help from somewhere, to keep going. But I have faith. The people will step forward."

Then breaking into a smile, Mr. Bunce adds: "Up there in Erie when they opened, four years ago, there was so much opposition that they moved the manager in at night! Now, it is the nicest house on the block and everybody is proud of it!"

HOPE AT YOUNGSVILLE HALFWAY HOUSE

Allegheny Outdoor Club Plans Hiking, Biking

Allegheny Outdoor Club offers a choice of hiking or biking from Dunhams Siding to Chapman State Park Sunday, participants to meet at the court house parking lot at 1 p.m.

Bill Highhouse will lead the hikers and Bob Foster will head bikers on a six-mile State Game Lands road. No cars are allowed on this road and since it is all down hill, it should provide easy traveling.

A truck will be available to haul bikes from the court house to the starting point and return them from the park. It is suggested bikers bring blankets to protect bikes while being trucked.

A general meeting of Allegheny Outdoor Club will be held Thursday, Sept. 30 at 7:30 p.m. at Northwest Savings Hospitality Room. Activities for the coming months will be planned.

Allen Seeks Legislation For Loans

(TMO Harrisburg Bureau)

HARRISBURG—An amendment to existing law, sponsored by Warren County Representative William W. Allen of Tidioute, whose legislative district includes Forest County, would require an applicant for a state loan under the industrial development act to obtain certification from the State Department of Environmental Resources that the project for which a loan would be made would not cause pollution.

If the loan would be used to expand existing facilities granting the loan would be contingent upon proof that the present operation is not causing pollution.

The legislation stipulates that if any project of the industrial development agency be a source of pollution the authority would not grant any further loan until the agency enters into an agreement providing for abatement of the pollution.

It is provided that should the agreement be violated by the borrower the loan would be recalled.

China Lobbyists Claim A Victory

By Robert A. Barnes
Congressional Quarterly

WASHINGTON —Advocates of a new American open door policy toward communist China and her seating in the United Nations are jubilant over what they consider a major lobbying victory in the United States.

Friends of the nationalist China regime on Taiwan are glum but continuing to fight.

Peking proponents won the U.S. government over with little fanfare. For several years they have worked at close range behind the scenes among the wielders of power.

The communist government has ruled the China mainland for more than two decades; this affected the thinking of some. So did American impatience with the drawn-out Vietnam war.

LOBBYING A FACTOR

But lobbying, nevertheless, was a conspicuous factor.

The targets of an intensive drive to reverse the American anti-Peking stand: top policymakers in Washington.

This campaign was supported by activities aimed at shaping the attitudes of those a step removed from power but influential in politics, communications and academic circles.

THE RESULTS

The results are nearly all the lobbyists on behalf of the People's Republic of China could ask:

+United States cosponsorship of a resolution to seat the Peking regime in the United Nations.

+United States support for giving the communist government China's seat on the Security Council.

+Lifting of the ban on trade with mainland China imposed by President Truman during the Korean War.

+A series of other American overtures toward Peking, capped by President Nixon's bombshell announcement of plans to visit China.

Almost all that remains is the future of Taiwan.

Robert A. Burton, executive secretary of Citizens to Change United States China Policy, says he ought to revise his brochure. It says American China policy should be changed.

Now that's old-hat. The policy has been changed—and by a Republican President with a reputation for anti-Communism.

"We ought to be claiming credit for it," Burton says.

MANY PRESSURES

The turnaround in American policy is traceable to quite a few sources. The many groups and agents, both domestic and foreign, which have tried to influence the government comprise—as in the past—not one China lobby but several.

The China lobby, including both sides, shows a clear split along the lines commonly called liberal and conservative.

Both of those camps, however, are divided by other considerations: commercial, ideological and nationalistic, among others.

And many former foes of accepting communist control of China have vanished from power circles or changed their views.

OPPOSED TO ADMISSION

The Committee of One Million—Against the Admission of Communist China to the United Nations is a longtime veteran of China policy struggle. Its leading figure is Dr. Walter H. Judd, a former medical missionary in China and former Republican U.S. Representative.

The committee contends the Peking government should not be admitted to the United Nations until it adheres to UN principles.

Among those siding with it in general policy are:

+GM Consultants Inc., headed by former Sen. George L. Murphy of California, which registered June 3 with the Justice Department to handle public relations for the Republic of China.

+The American Legion, which on Sept. 2 endorsed President Nixon's visit to Peking but reaffirmed its opposition to opening diplomatic relations with the communist government or granting it a UN seat.

+The AFL-CIO, whose executive council on Aug. 10 urged the President to reexamine his new China policies.

The Veterans of Foreign Wars, the American Security Council and several organizations which describe themselves as anti-Communist or conservative.

FAVOR ADMISSION

A leader in the fight for Peking admission, the Committee for New China Policy, is active on three lobbying fronts: Congress, the executive branch and the United Nations. Founder Thomas B. Manton, son of an American missionary, says his is "the only group with a strict one-China policy."

While director of international affairs for the United Church of Christ in 1970, Manton was a consultant to the U.S.-China committee of the Members of Congress for Peace Through Law. Manton says members have advised Henry A. Kissinger, Mr. Nixon's foreign policy adviser, as well as Senators Edward M. Kennedy, Edmund S. Muskie and George S. McGovern.

Other organizations actively favoring mainland China's membership in the United Nations include:

+Citizens to Change United States China Policy, headed by Allen S. Whiting, a University of Michigan professor who was formerly director of Far East research for the State Department. In addition to Whiting and Burton, the group includes former Assistant Secretary of State for Far Eastern Policy Roger Hilsman who worked to change American policy during the Kennedy Administration.

+National Committee on United States-China Relations, headed by Alexander Eckstein, another University of Michigan professor and former State Department official. The committee says it receives most of its financial support from the Ford Foundation and the Rockefeller Brothers Fund.

+Members of Congress for Peace Through Law, U.S.-China committee. Rep. Patsy T. Mink of Hawaii, chairman, testified at Senate hearings in June advocating seating of the People's Republic of China in the United Nations and opening of diplomatic relations.

A number of interests have supported closer American relations with mainland China for commercial reasons. Among them are the American Farm Bureau Federation, General Motors, Xerox Corporation, Monsanto Chemical Corp., Pan American World Airways, Trans World Airlines, United Air Lines, Boeing Company and spokesmen for the Emergency Committee for American Trade, a group of multinational corporations.

The Council on Foreign Relations in its annual report for the year ending June 30, 1970, noted its publication of eight books on China-United States relations during the 1960s. They were financed by Ford Foundation grants.

"The China study had an important influence both within and outside of government in helping to generate discussion of policies which many had previously felt it was dangerous to consider with the same frankness that policies in other

Boom In U.S. Art

By SYLVIA PORTER

A new, phenomenal boom in American art, spanning our history back to the Indians—a boom piled on top of boom—is now underway. So dramatic has it become that New York's famous Parke-Bernet gallery and London's Sotheby have set up "American Week" sales for October and also have scheduled a special auction of American Indian artifacts just before Thanksgiving —to include items such as baskets, bead work, sashes, saddle bags, original Indian costumes.

So spectacular have the price increases already been that during this past auction season at Parke-Bernet, Thomas Eskins' "Cowboys in the Badlands" brought down $210,000. Gilbert Stuart's familiar "Portrait of George Washington" brought $205,000. Mary Cassatt's "Summertime" brought $150,000. Thomas Moran's "Mountain of the Holy Cross" brought $150,000. Thomas Moran's "Mountain of the Holy Cross" brought $110,000. Frederic Remington's "Answering the Call" brought $105,000. And the story was similar for Benjamin West, Reginald Marsh, Winslow Homer, William Harnett, Charles Russell, etc.

And so extraordinary does the boom appear to many that John Marion, Parke-Bernet's chief auctioneer, offers the special explanation that there "has been a very deep-rooted change in the sensibility of the public toward 200 years or more of American culture."

The boom, in short, reflects the resurgence in our country of patriotism and interest in Americans of all kinds. It also reflects our higher levels of educational attainment, our unprecedented volume of foreign travel and museum going, record spending by young and old Americans and by large corporations for American art works, the conviction that art has a more durable value than many other investments.

But how can YOU, if you are eager to become a collector-investor in art, especially American art, get into this?

(1) Invest as much time as you possibly can, before you invest a penny, in self-education in your chosen field. Subscribe to art auction catalogs. Visit galleries, study prices, available pictures, prints, etc. Keep notes. Compare details.

(2) Stick to the top galleries and art dealers to help protect yourself against grossly inflated prices and even frauds.

(3) Don't be afraid of the swank galleries and auction houses. Fully 60 per cent of all lots auctioned by Parke-Bernet go for less than $250.

(4) View your art buying as a 5-to-10-year project to give you a chance to educate yourself in your area and a better chance to stumble across a work which may be unfashionable now but may stage a comeback later.

(5) Don't fall for fads in works by modern artists. Often a single art show, backed by major drum-beating, can cause prices to soar. Then they drop back after the publicity has subsided.

(6) Buy the best examples within the field you choose that you can afford. Price trends during the 1969-70 recession underline the importance of quality and rarity in art buying.

(7) Try to make a deal with any gallery with which you do business permitting you to trade up—with the gallery rebuying works as you accumulate more money to invest in higher quality examples.

(8) When you buy, get a written statement from the gallery or seller detailing the price, title, name of artist, year the work was painted, medium used, degree of restoration, if any. A reputable dealer will stand behind the description he gives you.

(9) Steer clear of fantastic art "bargains," particularly involving well-known, high-priced artists. Professionals in the art field know a lot more than you do and almost surely will find the bargains before you do. Catalogs will give you price guidelines.

(10) Be on guard against art frauds and forgeries, now becoming prevalent among modern artists as well as Old Masters. Your best safeguard is to buy only from a reputable art dealer.

(11) Try to arrange with any dealer from whom you buy art to let you live with the work in your home for a week or so before you make a final decision. This will give you an idea of its aesthetic durability.

(12) And don't fail to get the advice of an outside expert, on the authenticity as well as the value of any art work, if you are investing a big sum. Your best sources would be museum curators, scholars, the artist himself or a member of his family.

Sirius is the name of the brightest visible star. It is 28 times brigher than the sun.

In view of the fact that the U.S. Army is now engaged in the establishment of a modern, all-volunteer force comprised of young men and women who have the opportunity to serve their nation and at the same time improve themselves, Gov. Milton J. Shapp has proclaimed the month of October as Modern Volunteer Army Month in Pennsylvania.

At least one Philadelphian is confusing the cost of living with the cost of loving, according to the Philadelphia Region Office of Emergency Preparedness.

The office, which administers the wage-price freeze in the Mid-Atlantic states, this week received a call from a gentleman who escorts ladies for a fee. He explained that his normal charge is $7.00 an hour, but that he had contracted for a package weekend. He wanted to know if the wage-price freeze would allow him to charge $7.00 an hour for the time he spent sleeping during the weekend.

The wage-salary specialist at the Region said that while the situation did not exactly fall within the freeze, he felt that since the sleep-time did not constitute worktime, there should be no charge at all.

The caller gallantly, but reluctantly, agreed.

The monthly luncheon meeting of Northwest Pennsylvania Counselors of Alcoholics will be held Wednesday, Oct. 13 at Voyager Inn, Franklin from noon until 2 p.m. John Henlen, counselor of alcoholics, will talk about the program of Sharon General Hospital with respect to alcoholics as in-patients and out-patients. Lunch is $2.30 and reservations may be made by contacting William O. Penrose, Pennsylvania Dept. of Health, Region VI office, 996 South Main st., Meadville, Pa. 16335.

The local horse show sponsored by the 4-H Russell Rustlers will be held this Sunday, Sept. 26 instead of Sept. 19 as was previously reported.

The show will be open to all area entrants under the age of 19. The program starts at 10 a.m. at the Byron Landell farm, approximately 1.5 miles west of Russell on Route 957.

Entrance fee is .25 cents. Refreshments will be served.

Pointing a pistol at another person, even if the gun is only a blank-firing "starter's" gun, is illegal. That's what Julian B. Carter, 43, of Central Hotel in Olean, N.Y. found out. He was arrested by Olean police and charged with possession of a deadly weapon after allegedly pointing such a weapon at another roomer in the hotel and telling him he was "going to kill you." Bail was set at $250 for Carter's appearance in Olean City Court Monday.

Malicious mischief and thefts of street signs will cost Foster Township in McKean County $2,000 in replacements this year, the board of supervisors learned Monday night from Albert Sweeley, road superintendent. He blamed youthful offenders for the widespread destruction and larcenies.

FEW VIOLATORS

DALLAS (AP) — Most criminals paroled in Texas go on to constructive lives, a parole staff supervisor said here recently.

George Young, with the Board of Pardons and Paroles, said only "10 per cent violate their paroles and only three per cent do so by committing new crimes."

Three Teachers Strikes End; Two Continuing

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Three teachers' strikes ended in Pennsylvania Thursday, while three school districts continued to seek court solutions to work stoppages. Two other strikes continued unabated.

Cambria County Court Judge George W. Griffith issued a temporary injunction ending a 20-day strike by some 450 teachers. The action followed two days of hearings.

In handing down the ruling, Judge Griffith declared the strike had created "a clear and present danger" to the community.

Earlier Thursday, teachers and the school board in the Coatesville School District resolved a dispute over back pay and ended a 13-day strike by some 475 teachers.

Teachers in the Bristol Township district in Bucks County returned to their classes Thursday morning after ratification of a new contract late Wednesday.

Their pact includes an agreement which will not require teachers to make up strike days at the end of the school year. About 700 teachers had been on strike since Sept. 8, affecting 15,000 students.

In the Hazleton School District in Luzerne County, Judge Bernard Brominski dissolved a temporary injunction issued last week and said teachers were free to resume their strike at midnight Sunday if a settlement is not reached.

Meanwhile, an injunction hearing continued in Washington County where five taxpayers sought to end a strike by teachers in the Burgettstown School District. About 90 teachers have been on strike since Sept. 8, keeping 3,000 students from attending school.

The fourth hearing was in Allegheny County Court on a request by the Carlynton School District to force teachers to return to work and end a 23-day strike.

Two other districts remained plagued by teachers walkouts. They were Saucon Valley in Northhampton County, and Oil City in Venango County.

SHAPP SAYS

Gear Education Towards People, Not Things

HARRISBURG AP) — Gov. Shapp said Thursday education in Pennsylvania should be geared towards people instead of things.

Addressing the 50th Pennsylvania Education Congress, Shapp stressed the importance of pupils as opposed to concern over new school buildings. A critic of high-price schools, the governor added:

"A building represents not only a financial commitment, but an educational commitment as well. Only certain kinds of learning can take place in certain kinds of buildings. An elementary school building with fixed classroom walls cannot easily be used for open classrooms. And a new medical school building with a heavy investment in laboratories and classrooms may be incompatible with some of the changes that are now being advocated in medical education."

Shapp said the movements in recent years for basic and college education are "reaching a climax."

"In part they are ending because they have accomplished what they set out to do," he said. "In part, they are ending because their very success, while opening new opportunities, has created new problems as well."

He said there is a taxpayers revolt against the high cost of education, basically against what he called the "bricks and mortar" aspect of building expensive schools.

Shapp said the Commonwealth must look for ways to reduce the demands of schooling and gave these suggestions:

— We should make schooling unnecessary for many purposes. "It ought to be a first order of business to root out every requirement which is not strictly necessary."

— We should shorten school wherever possible and take advantage of the year-round school. We should explore the three-year college.

— "We should do everything in our power to break down the barriers, both physical and psychological, between school and the real world."

59.8% Of 1971 Goal United Fund Reaches

A tabulation of results in five of the seven soliciting divisions of the Warren County United Fund campaign shows contributions amounting to $118,810 as of noon Thursday as of noon Thursday, according to chairman H.T. Bright.

This is 59.8 per cent of the 1971 goal of $198,700 and represents reports from industry, special gifts, commercial, residential and county divisions.

Industry, according to division head Ralph Grimm, has produced $87,041 toward its goal of $128,000.

Special Gifts, reported by W.F. Crossett has accounted for $21,972 toward its goal of $28,250.

Commercial advance gifts, chaired by Audrey Torrance, has turned in $4,353 but is striving for a goal of $7,200.

The amount raised to date in the residential division has been received by mail, according to division leader Richard Huber. The amount is $3,431 with a goal of $6,100.

Results in the county to date have also been mail contributions. Chairman Ursula Johnson reports $2,013 toward a goal of $6,400.

No reports have yet been made in the professional and public service divisions headed by Jack Hampson and Andrew Donick.

Bright said that returns so far have been gratifying and have reflected increased giving in many instances. If such a trend continues, he said, the 1971 goal can be achieved and the 11 participating agencies will receive their grants as recommended by the United Fund budget committee.

The chairman asks all workers to turn in their reports to headquarters as soon as possible since the campaign ends October 19.

State Store Employes May Strike

HARRISBURG (AP) — The Retail Clerks Union, representing some 3,000 State Store employes, said Thursday it may go on strike if contract negotiations fail to bring about a settlement.

The union has been negotiating with the state since March 18 and is planning rallies this Sunday in Philadelphia, Pittsburgh and other Cities. A spokesman for the group said strike votes would be taken at the rallies.

"That our members should continue to labor under 1920 style conditions, including six days a week at straight time for a business that nets $150 million a year is absurd," said chief negotiator Wendell W. Young.

Although the work week is six days, the spokesman said, it consists of 39 hours.

Hospitalization For Children Needn't Be A Nightmare

HERSHEY, Pa. (AP) — The year-old Milton S. Hershey Medical Center opens its pediatrics floor Monday with a theory that hospitalization for children needn't be a nightmare.

There's a multi-colored playroom, patient go-carts, a school program, folding beds for parents and a planned children's art gallery.

"The major effort of the children's service of the hospital will be to make the child feel that this is really just an extension of his home," said Dr. Nicholas M. Nelson, professor and chairman of pediatrics.

The playroom is filled with coloring books, teddy bears, toys, rocking seats, a small slide, doll houses and cutouts. The colors range from white to brilliant yellow and orange.

"Nothing painful will happen in the playroom," said Charlotte Passinger, the hospital's child activity specialist.

This, she said, is in contrast to many hospitals where both play activities and painful needle sticking occur in the same room.

The playroom will not only be oriented toward recreation, but toward learning, said Miss Passinger, who is qualified both in child development and elementary education.

"If a child is admitted for two or three weeks, I will be in touch with his school, and I can continue his education," she said. "Also, we will have puzzles to develop a child's eye and hand coordination; paint, for children to paint out their feelings; and play dough to work out their feelings."

"We don't want a child to stay in one room" Miss Passinger said.

To encourage a child's mobility, the hospital has brought in go-carts — a sort of chaise lounge wheelchair. The children can move themselves by turning the large wheels, and have plenty of room to store toys in their vehicle.

Lining the corridors of the pediatrics floor are yellow walls that will be used for children's drawings.

There are both single and multi-bed rooms in the 65-bed children's unit. Most have easy chairs that fold out into adult beds.

"Parents belong here," Dr. Nelson said. "You must convince a child he isn't away from home. Some children have nightmares 10 months after leaving the hospital."

When possible, parents will be allowed to visit children in the division's intensive care units. In the future, parents may assume some nursing duties, Dr. Nelson said.

He also explained the pediatrics staff will use flexibility. For instance, there is no specific age limit for admitting youngsters to the pediatrics division.

"You can have a big 12-year-old in the regular hospital, and a small 16-year-old in pediatrics," Dr. Nelson said.

The concept of forcing a child to rest will be virtually eliminated, he explained.

"Enforced rest is a disappearing concept," he said. "When a child is ready to get up, he's probably well enough to get up."

Judge Hears Arguments In Suit Against Gettysburg Tower

GETTYSBURG, Pa. (AP) — Adams County Judge John A. MacPhail said Thursday he doesn't know when he'll hand down a decision in a case brought by the Commonwealth against construction of an observation tower near the historic Civil War battlefield.

The judge heard oral argument Wednesday in the state's suit for a permanent injunction against the project planned by Washington, D.C, businessman Thomas R. Ottenstein.

MacPahil has six weeks of court scheduled on other cases so the tower decision may have to wait.

There are two key questions for MacPhail to consider:

—Will the $1 million 307-foot tower be a "classroom in the sky," as Ottenstein claims, or a "cash register in the sky," as State Atty. Gen. J. Shane Creamer argued Wednesday?

—Will the tower spoil the environment, in violation of the state's new environmental bill of rights?

MacPhail had granted a temporary injunction to block the project in August.

The towner would overlook the site of what historians claim was the turning point of the war between the states 108 years ago.

Jerome Gerber, a lawyer representing Ottenstein, charged Wednesday that Creamer, at the urging of Gov. Shapp, had "jumped the gun and was firing from the hip" in filing the lawsuit. Gerber contended the action was premature and that the state lacked the proper legal machinery to implement the environmental law.

Gerber also charged:

—The state's action violates Ottenstein's constitutional rights of due process of law and a jury trial.

—The state is competing with the federal government because the U.S. Parks Service had agreed on July 2 that Ottenstein could build the tower at a specific location.

—And the state is tampering with the rights of an individual to do what he wants with his own property.

Creamer argued that Ottenstein was not denied his constitutional rights.

The attorney general also told the court that no testimony was presented during the trial last month to support Ottenstein's contention that the tower could be considered a classroom.

Both the state and Ottenstein said they would appeal the ruling if it is against them.

Ottenstein had purchased ground for the tower at a cost of $62,000. But, failing to get federal government approval of the site, he donated the ground to the Parks Service in exchange for its approval of another site.

Ottenstein hasn't said whether he has been able to purchase the alternate site.

State Revenue Bond, Mortgage Program Sets Monthly Record

HARRISBURG (AP) — The state's Revenue Bond and Mortgage Program, which enables industrialists to finance expansion programs at low interest rates, set a monthly record in August with loans and bonds for 24 firms totaling nearly $14 million.

Commerce Secretary Walter G. Arader released the figures Thursday.

He said that 764 jobs were either protected or created through the loans, he said, adding that one $5 million bond issue enabled one firm to meet pollution control costs.

Most loans were reported made at between 5.5 and 6.5 per cent interest.

Margo

Pat Tracy writes from Oblong, Ill.: "I'm with you, baby. You say everything like I wish I could. Only when I say it, people get sore."

Funny thing, Pat. I get the same reaction.

When I suggested we recycle J. Edgar Hoover, for example, I got letters like this: "Listen, Margo, how dare you write so unkindly about the honorable J. Edgar Hoover? He's dedicated his life to preserving the American way."

"If you and your fans don't like it here, why don't you all go to Russia and stay there? As for myself, I love America and everything it stands for."

"It burns me up to think that Mr. Hoover has fought for freedom of speech and freedom of the press—and you're using it against him!"

Grateful for J. Edgar Hoover

Dear Grateful: Pretty nervy, isn't it, to use freedom of the press the wrong way? Some of us just can't follow directions.

From the T.R. Kelly family: "Enclosed is a clipping about Robert Kennedy, Jr. and his SECOND bout with the law. First it was for smoking marijuana, now it's for 'sauntering and loitering.' He also spit ice cream in the face of a policeman.

"Next time you compare the virtues of the Nixon and Kennedy families, we think you should do some deep thinking. There has been no scandal in the Nixon family yet. The Kennedys, however, are almost as bad as FDR's family."

Dear Kellys: Not to mention Warren Harding.

From Casey N.: "Talk about sour grapes. I know why you criticized Vice-President Agnew's trip. Because it cost a lot of money and you were jealous. Who would't have loved to have been in his shoes and taken a trip like that?"

Dear Casey: Not me. Honest. Those cleated shoes would have been perfectly useless. I don't play golf.

From B.E. Schneider: "I cannot for the life of me understand why a person of your apparent education and talent for writing would resort to using the word 'stink' as often as you do. When I read your column and you use that dreadful word, it's like having cold water thrown in my face—shocking and almost disgusting. There must be other words that would convey the same idea."

Dear B.E.: I guess I could use "mephitis," but then people would write to ask what it meant, and I'd have to say "stink."

From J.C.B.: "About those dirty sweatshirts with the Walt Disney characters. The fact that some outfit is exploiting filth in this manner is just another of the sicknesses of man. Why didn't you take a firm stand against these manufacturers, anyway?

"As for what to tell children who happen to see them, tell them the truth: that the Devil and sick people in this world are trying to tempt us every day.

"And last, but certainly first, if you believe in God you know that He disapproves of this sort of thing. In Matthew, chapter 13, Christ speaks of people like these manufacturers as our enemies. May God bless you."

Dear J.C.B.: And keep us from dirty sweatshirts. Amen.

Ann Landers

Answers Your Problems

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I hope you will print this. It might help some unfortunate girl get wise to her situation.

When a man keeps a mistress in the shadows he does so for a very interesting reason, one which most mistresses do not understand. She is, of course, lead to believe that if it were only possible, the man would leave his wife and marry her so the whole world could know of their great love.

But usually the truth is he will not divorce his wife and marry her because it would defeat his purpose. If he married her, she would then be a part of the real world, which is exactly what he is trying to escape. She would be no different from his present wife. The excitement would vanish. The man who takes a mistress, does so NOT because she is the love of his life, who he met too late, but because he wants to flee from the demands of everyday living which have become too heavy. The fact of the matter is, if he had the guts to stand up to life, he wouldn't need her.—Standing Up In Wilmington, N.C.

DEAR STANDING: You sound like a guy who has been there. Thanks for writing.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Please tell me what to do about our 15-year-old daughter. Several months ago, Lisa started to hang around the service station a few blocks from here. When we discovered she had a crush on a 19-year-old boy who works the night shift, we checked into the boy's background and found out he is no good.

We told Lisa she was not to see the boy again. For several days she was quiet and sullen but seemed to be behaving. On a hunch, I checked her bed at 11:30 p.m. one night and she was not in it. I sent my husband down to the service station and sure enough, she was there. He brought her home.

Last week the boy's picture was in the paper in connection with a holdup. We are relieved because now he is in jail and Lisa knows he's a bad actor. But she is taking it so hard we don't know how to deal with her. The girl will not eat with the family and she looks like the wrath of God. I discovered that she's been sleeping in the dress she was wearing when she was last with him "because it smells like him." (Gasoline.) She wants to go see him in jail and we will not allow it. Are we wrong? Please, Ann, suggest something to get our daughter back on the track.—Distraught Parents in Shamokin

DEAR PARENTS: Your daughter needs more than a suggestion from me. She needs professional counseling and I urge you to see that she gets it. It sounds as if this girl's been out of control for quite some time. Get going.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: You outsmarted yourself when you told the man who wrote about going steady with the same girl for 32 years to quit bothering you with phony letters. Again you made a point of the fact that the letter came from New Haven and accused the Yalies of playing games. Don't you think anybody in New Haven has real problems? I used to live in that town and I can tell you that there are plenty of mixed-up people there.

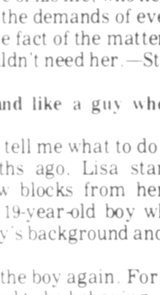

Do you actually think it's impossible for a couple to go together for 32 years? If so, you've got a lot to learn. My personal opinion is that anyone who writes to you from anywhere has got to be nuts.—Green Bay

DEAR G.B.: You wrote, didn't you? I don't think you're nuts. But then I live in Chicago. What do I know?

LOVE RANKS FOURTH

DALLAS (AP) — Love Field has become the nation's fourth busiest airport, outranked only by O'Hare in Chicago, Los Angeles International and Atlanta, according to the Federal Aviation Administration.

Love Field handled 407,622 regular air carrier and general aviation operations during 1970, said Howard Megredy, aviation director for the city.

This means its volume is now larger than that of John F. Kennedy in New York, San Francisco International or Miami.

Hints From Heloise

DEAR HELOISE:

Here's something for your fans of good ol' Southern cooking:

When you cook grits, instead of using oleo or butter for seasoning, why not try adding some American cheese? It not only adds color, but nutrition, too.

Gee-Gee

DEAR HELOISE:

My chubby, overactive, 3-months-old used to be a slippery terror in his plastic bathtub. So I covered the bottom of his tub with rubber stick-on, non-skid decals for showers and bathtubs.

Now the baby no longer is frightened by sudden slips, and I no longer have bad moments when he squirms unexpectedly.

Mrs. James W. Pierson

Just think of all the mothers who will thank you for this grand hint! Now baby's tub is like Mommie's and Daddy's and "in the swing."

South Korean Families Adopting New Structure

N.Y. Times Service

SEOUL, SOUTH KOREA—One of the most popular television programs in South Korea these days, a serial melodrama about an aged widower whose married children do not like to live with him, dramatizes a shift taking place in the family system of this ancient nation as part of social changes resulting from modernization.

Traditionally, the Korean family has been characterized by a system in which the father is the respected and unquestioned head.

Family relationships in Korea are based on Confucian teachings, which were introduced from China more than 15 centuries ago and still remain the basic code of ethics for the traditional Korean.

According to Confucius, children must be loyal to their parents in filial piety, the negligence of which is one of the gravest among many sins. The eldest son is supposed to live with his parents even after marriage and wait on them until they die.

But this attitude has changed considerably in modern Korea.

A study by the Ministry of Health and Social Affairs conducted last year disclosed that only one-fifth of the 1,733 families surveyed across South Korea had grandparents, parents and children living under one roof. Two thirds of the families were composed only of parents and their unmarried children. Bigger families in which three generations and other relatives live together accounted for 10 per cent of the total.

The average size of South Korean families was 5.37 persons last year, a significant decrease from nearly seven half a century ago, according to another official survey.

An opinion poll conducted by the newspaper Kyunghyang Shinmun late last year showed that 81 per cent of the youths polled felt the need to transform Korea's traditional family system for modern social development.

Speaking at a recent sociology seminar held at Seoul's Christian Academy House, Prof. Lee Hyo Jae of Ewha Woman's University cited factors contributing to the current transformation.

They included the movement of large numbers of people from rural areas to the cities, changes in social classes, women's increased social participation through employment and shifts in housing patterns symbolized by many new apartment buildings.

Professor Lee said that most young married couples did not want to live with their parents even though they agree to support them.

An increasing number of young Koreans are defying the old custom that their parents or go-betweens arrange their marriages. Western-style dating is becoming popular.

Despite such changes, South Korean family life is still greatly influenced by tradition.

Most married sons, though living separately, support their aged parents and visit them several times every month to pay respect.

In the countryside a great majority of the eldest sons live with their parents. Young lovers ask the approval of their parents before marriage.

Experts Say Vaccinations May Soon Be Discontinued

By WALTER SULLIVAN
N.Y. Times Service

GENEVA — Vaccination scars long a challenge to dress designers and symbols of a calculated medical risk, are to become a thing of the past for most Americans and Britons.

The British have already announced that smallpox vaccinations as a routine procedure are to stop except for travelers to infected areas, hospital workers and others likely to be exposed.

A similar announcement is expected in the United States next month. The decision on administering the shots in the United States will still be up to individual physicians, but the health authorities are expected to recommend against smallpox vaccinations. State health departments have already been advised of the decision, according to leaders of the smallpox eradication program of the World Health Organization here. Travelers arriving in the United States no longer need evidence of vaccination unless they have come from one of the few remaining areas where smallpox is endemic.

The administration of smallpox vaccine is a calculated risk in that the death rate from primary vaccinations is roughly one in a million. Because of the progress toward eradication of the disease, the danger from vaccination has now become greater than the danger from smallpox for most Americans and Britons.

According to Dr. Donald A. Henderson, who is on loan from the United States Public Health Service to direct the W.H.O. program for smallpox eradication, from six to twelve Americans die each year as a result of vaccination. Yet no one in the United States has contracted the disease since 1949.

In Britain during the last 20 years there have been 131 indigenous cases of the disease, resulting in 47 deaths. However, 100 Britons died from the effects of vaccination, according to Dr. Frank Perkins, director of immunological products control at Britain's National Institute for Medical Research.

Writing of Britain's policy change in a recent issue of The New Scientist he said, "We must not be lulled into a feeling of complacency, however, and the situation must be kept under constant surveillance."

"The proportion of Britain's non-immune population will now increase," he continued, "and within a few years we shall need immediate emergency action should a case of smallpox enter the country."

Henderson believes worldwide eradication of the disease will be achieved by the end of 1973 if civil disturbance or other unexpected impediments do not interfere. If a few focal points remain, he said today, it should be possible to concentrate available forces on them to complete the job.

Smallpox is one of the few scourges of mankind that, it is believed, can readily be wiped off the face of theearth. There is no reservoir of infection in animal populations and the human form can be blocked by a vaccine derived from cowpox. It is considered to remain endemic in only five regions: Ethiopia, the Sudan, Northern India, West Pakistan and along the Indian borders of Nepal.

Areas that have seemingly been cleared of smallpox in the last year or two include Southern India, East Pakistan and all of South and Central America. The last known South American outbreak was localized in a suburb of Rio De Janeiro last November.

The disease seems to die out once the number of those infected drops to a certain level and the percentage of those vaccinated is high enough. There was a small outbreak of smallpox in Germany last year when the disease was brought into the country by a traveler and transmitted to several others in a hospital.

Such person-to-person transmission is almost unknown. However, no country on the European continent is known to be planning an end of vaccination at this time.

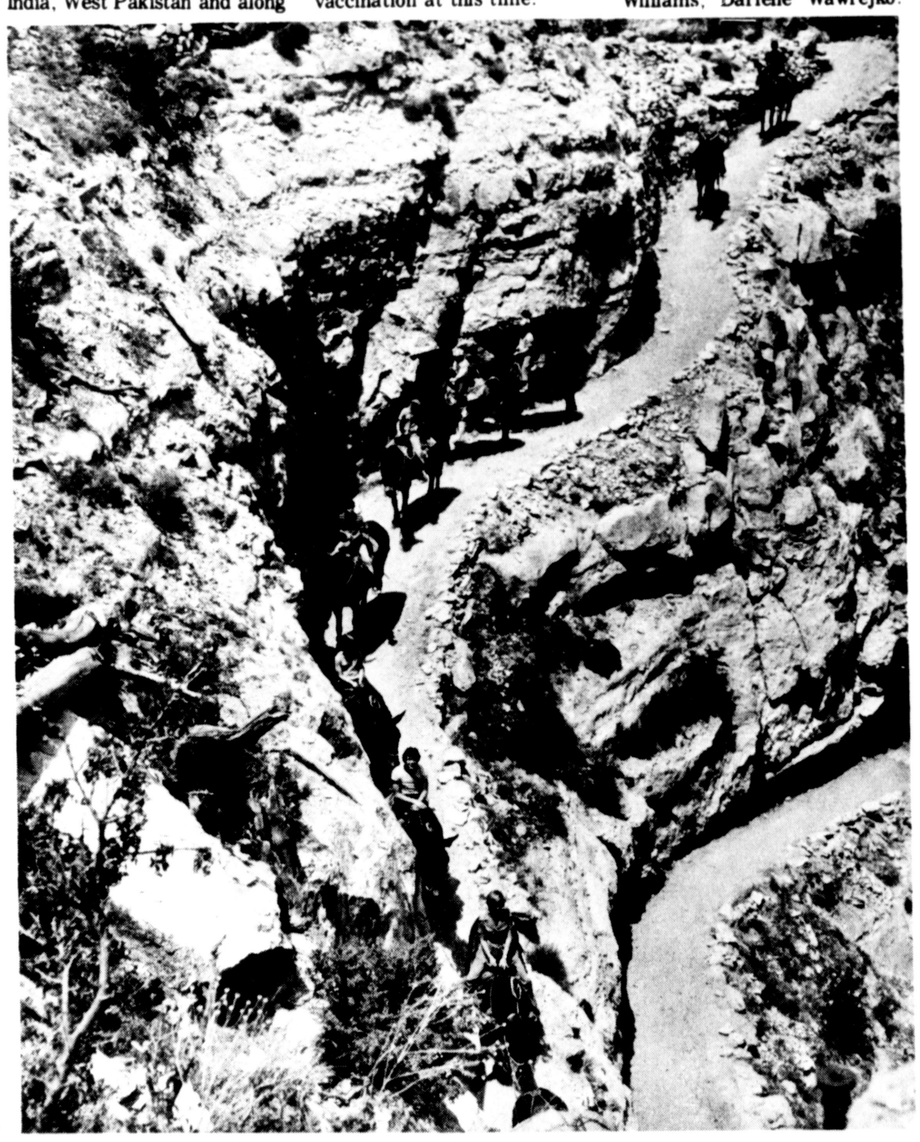

PREDICTS EPIDEMIC

DALLAS (AP) — Dr. Hal J. Dewlett, Dallas director of public health, predicts that this city will have an epidemic of Hong Kong flu this fall and winter.

"The same virulent strain of flu that first appeared in Hong Kong in 1968 then girdled the globe with disastrous results has broken out in that city again," Dr. Dewlett reported. "And nothing can stop it from spreading as it did before."

The 1968 outbreak hit thousands in Dallas in that year and in 1969. Nearly 6,000 persons died of the disease in the United States.

Leonardo da Vinci devised a large paddle wheel that drew cool air from the surface of a river into a conduit leading to the home of his patron, the Duke of Milan.

Fruit Growers Show Profit In Warren Area

(TMO Harrisburg Bureau)

HARRISBURG— Warren County fruit production last year put $2,700 into the pockets of county fruit growers, according to the State Department of Agriculture.

Total amount of sales showed an upswing over the previous year—up $450 from $2,250 in fruit sales during 1969.

Apples accounted for the major income for the county with $2,500 received from the sale of 84,000 pounds of apples; followed by tart cherries with 2,800 pounds sold valued at $200. Records show that "less than 200 bushels" of peaches were harvested.

(The department did not give a breakdown for pears, sweet cherries or grapes.)

Insofar as fruit production in 1969 was concerned, department records showed 63,000 pounds of apples picked from Warren County trees valued at $1,800 while peach production stood at 4,800 pounds valued at $400. The 600 pounds of sour cherries were sold for $50.

In another area, Warren countians last year tapped sugar maple trees within the county to the tune of 4,500 gallons (600 gallons over the preceding year) bringing in $24,300 from the sale of maple syrup. A year earlier $21,300 was earned from maple syrup.

Inflation Will Hike Cost Of Electricity

HARRISBURG— Inflation will cause an increase in the price of electricity for Pennsylvania consumers in the near future, a nationally-known utility expert predicted here today.

Within 30 years electric power will help bring about a "revolution in business transportation, environmental control and home living." Edwin Vennard, president of Commonwealth Management Consultants in New York told more than 90 state government officials attending the Key State Personnel Meeting sponsored by the Pennsylvania Electric Association.

In the near future, however, the cost of electricity will rise because of "unusual inflation, the high cost of capital, increased labor and fuel costs and the costs of meeting the demand for environmental improvements."

Vennard stated that unless electric utilities are permitted to charge higher rates across the nation and in Pennsylvania the public will be hurt because local companies will not be able to meet the demands for good service.

"By the year 2000 electric consumption will be about seven times today's level," Vennard said.

This will have two significant effects on the environment. First, he said, power will come from an increasing number of clean nuclear plants; second, electricity will play a major role in cleaning up the environment through sewage treatment facilities, waste disposal systems and recycling plants.

Because building new power plants and transmission lines represents 12 percent of all commercial construction, it will also serve as "an economic pump-primer for years to come," Vennard said.

The utility expert predicted a number of advances which will develop due to electricity in the years ahead including:

— Beams of searing light, or other sophisticated techniques, that will vaporize all household refuse.

— Kitchens requiring less space. Small marble cabinets, suitable for living room decor, will house all basic cooking and refrigerating units.

— Floor-cleaning will be an all-electric task, probably by unguided robot electric sweepers; electricity will also clean clothing.

— Home computers will keep bank accounts and household bills in order.

— The home TV screen will occupy an entire living-room wall.

In the community outside the home, there will probably be:

— Quite complete computerization, likely to be handled by "computer utility companies." Anyone can acquire instant knowledge of everything known on any subject. All schools, libraries and physicians, among others, will have computer terminals. The "utility" will keep all information banks.

— Large numbers of people will be moved more conveniently in central city areas. The internal combustion engine will be used only for intercity or long-distance driving. Downtown centers will move people on such devices as electrically-powered walkways.

— Downtown city areas will be climate-controlled, already indicated by today's new, air-conditioned shopping malls.

— Industry, heavily automated, will be clean; the variety of available goods will be much greater than now.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 NT	Pass	3 NT	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Six of ♠

Today's hand netted a significant swing to the United States Team when it was dealt in an international match against Argentina and illustrates an excellent altho unorthodox point of defensive play.

The bidding was the same at both tables and the final contract was three no trump. West opened the six of spades and the seven was played from dummy, but the course of events differed at this point according to East's procedure.

At the table where the Americans held the North-South cards, the Argentine defender seated East, put up the king of spades and returned the ten to drive out the ace. South has only five tricks—two spades and three diamonds and must drive out both the ace of clubs and the ace of hearts to bring his total up to nine.

Clubs were led first and East went in with the ace to lead another spade which South won with the queen. A diamond was led to the queen and a heart was returned. When East ducked, South put up the king for the fulfilling trick. The diamonds were cashed, followed by the clubs ending in dummy and another heart was led. East could not prevent South from scoring a 10th trick with the queen of hearts.

At the other table, the American player in the East position, put in the ten of spades at trick one, giving declarer the first trick with the queen. When a club was led to the jack, East played the ace and returned the king of spades to drive out the ace and unblock for his partner. A heart was led from dummy, but East put up the ace and led back the four of spades to West who cashed three spade tricks to defeat the contract.

East was looking at 12 points in his own hand and 11 in the dummy. Since declarer was known to have at least 16, only 1 point is missing, which means that West's suit is headed, at best by the jack. Unless South has a doubleton, therefore, the latter holds two stoppers in the suit. Inasmuch as East has the entry cards, he must make every effort to maintain communications with his partner to put the latter in when the spade suit becomes established.

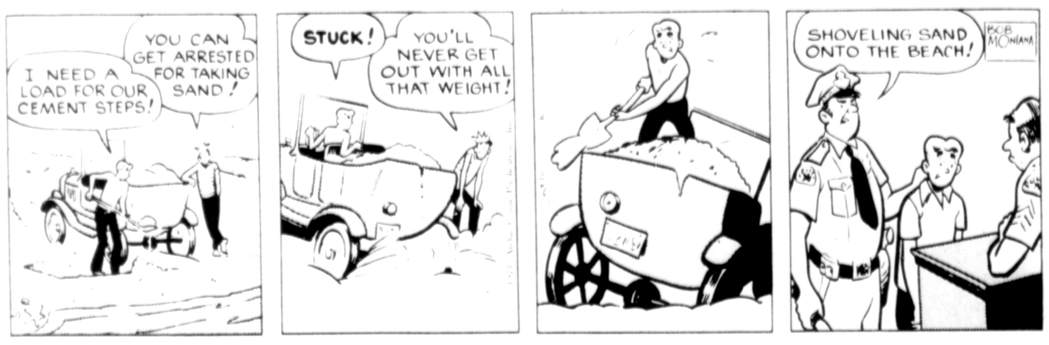

It is rather interesting to observe that South could have nullified East's deft performance by refusing the first trick. Whether East continues with the king or the four, there is no way to run the entire suit and the defense can take no more than four tricks. We cannot find it in ourselves to charge South with an error on the deal however.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 20)— A tailor-made day for you and your talents. You may face some "tight" situations, and anxious persons may vex, but if you remain serene, you can handle all well.

AQUARIUS (January 21 to February 19)— This day is a "plum" for those of you who have the right slant and get after essentials promptly, hopefully enthusiastic—all that most matters need!

PISCES (February 20 to March 20)— If you are on the ball, eager to achieve in the best ways available, and to MAKE opportunity where it is lacking, you will open new doors to delightful gains.

YOU BORN TODAY are endowed with a warm and outgoing personality; are creatively inclined and highly idealistic. Your tact, courtesy and gentle manners are outstanding, as are your foresightedness and integrity. Extremely versatile, there are many fields from which you can choose a career which is bound to be highly successful, but in either statesmanship or art you will find your true metier. Other fields open to you: The law, medicine, governmental work. Birthdate of: Marcus A. Hanna, Amer. statesman; John Marshall, U.S. Supreme Court Justice; Zachary Taylor, 12th Pres., U.S.A.

WATER INTAKE

A person can survive for more than two weeks without food but 10 days without water and he's had it. In a hot desert, the individual without liquids might die in less than 48 hours, especially if he perspires profusely. A loss of 10 per cent of body weight as water is disabling; 20 per cent is fatal. Water loss due to sweating can be enormous (up to three gallons) during a day of hard labor in extremely hot weather.

Under normal conditions the amount of urine eliminated by the kidneys is equal to the liquid intake by mouth (output equals intake). The water lost in perspiration and in exhaled air is roughly equivalent to the water content in solid foods. The minimum daily liquid requirement for an adult is approximately one quart. Most of us would do better on two quarts. This would increase the water losses in urine—an excellent idea since certain waste products are excreted only by the kidneys. Water is needed as a solvent especially for the end-products of protein metabolism. Theoretically, the more proteins consumed, the more liquids we should take.

The kidneys also have the ability to maintain water balance. They eliminate the excess liquids, and if too little has been taken, they conserve as much as possible. But the consequences of drinking too little fluid is a concentrated urine which interferes with waste product excretion.

Thirst is a good index of water need. An excess intake of salt or salty foods will produce thirst to maintain the proper water and mineral balance in the body. The normal kidneys also need the additional water to excrete the salt. But if the kidneys are malfunctioning, salt cannot be eliminated and water accumulates in the tissues.

TOMORROW: Dissolving Kidney Stones.

MARGINAL ULCER

R.A. writes: My husband had most of his stomach removed five years ago and was told he would not develop any more ulcers. But recently he started hemorrhaging. At the hospital, his physician found he had a marginal ulcer. How could this happen after the acid-producing sac was removed?

REPLY

When most of the stomach is removed, the remaining portion is connected to the small intestine. Now and then a new ulcer develops where these two structures join (marginal). In some instances, a marginal ulcer develops because some of the acid-producing cells remain. In others, the incision is too taut and an ulcer forms where the two surfaces were sewed together.

THE BREAKING POINT

W.R.D. writes: Please tell me all you can about a nervous breakdown.

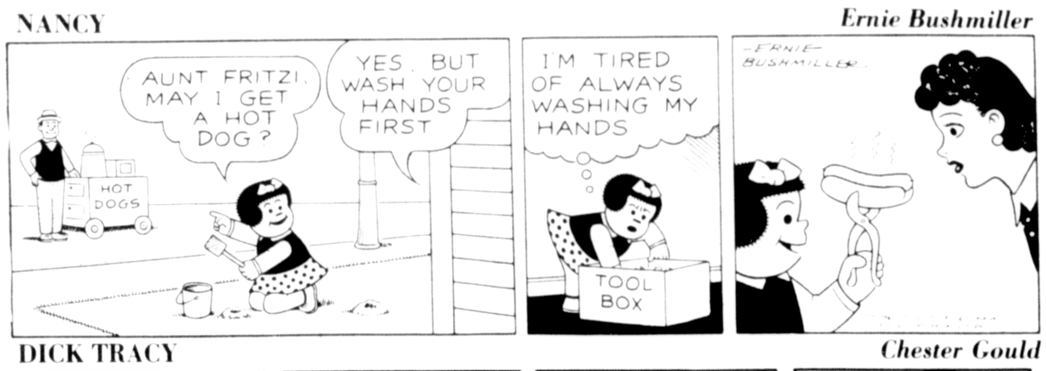

REPLY

Our space limitations make this impossible. However, the following are a few of the symptoms that develop. Some victims become hyperactive and irrational. Others refuse to eat and sleep poorly. Still others become depressed, cry easily, and blame themselves for not being able to do what others seem to accomplish with so little effort. As a rule, the individual escapes reality by shutting himself up in a world of his own. This is the breaking point and represents a useful safety valve. Otherwise, the man or woman might commit suicide.

Today's Health Hint—

Young people should continue exercising after they leave college so that all muscle tissue including the heart, will be maintained in good tone.

Around Sheffield

By Larry Stotz

The welcome mat will be out on the Allegheny National Forest for archers on Saturday, September 25. Bowmen may begin hunting the elusive whitetails one-half hour before sunrise. There will be 30 hunting days during the state-wide archery season that closes on Friday, October 29.

For the archer who fails to get his deer, either during the regular archery season or during the regular antlered and antlerless seasons, an extended 18-day archery season begins December 27. This post-season should offer good tracking snow.

Norm Koller, Sheffield District Ranger, reports that an increasing number of bow hunters for the past several years have been coming to the Allegheny National Forest to hunt. He points out that most of the campgrounds on the Forest will remain open to accommodate hunters and other fall recreationists, but that camping outside of developed campgrounds is also permitted on most of the Forest.

Norm told me that a young deer had been observed feeding within Hearts Content Campground on several occasions during archery season last year. Although the camping area was nearly filled with archers camped there, no attempt had been made to bag the young deer when it wandered outside the Safety Zone around the campground. The half-tame deer didn't offer the kind of challenge sought by hunters armed with bows and arrows. "The archer participates in a quality sport and appears to be a true sportsman," Koller said.

With the anti-hunting forces becoming increasingly powerful and vocal, Pennsylvania hunters can consider themselves fortunate that they have such liberal hunting opportunities to enjoy. There can always be expected to be campaigns waged against "blood sports." And as a larger segment of the total population becomes more and more urbanized, pressures can be expected to increase against any form of hunting—whether by bow and arrow or rifle. Just last year, a carefully organized hunt designed to reduce excess numbers of deer that were endangering the food supply on a New Jersey wildlife refuge was stopped in its tracks by a court injunction spear-headed by Friends of Animals, Inc., of New York City.

I read recently that California no longer has an archery season. Many people have the mistaken notion that bow hunters cripple great numbers of deer. But this is simply not so. These same people may pay little attention to the deer that are killed, or crippled by cars on the highways. In Pennsylvania alone, the car kill averages between 20,000 and 22,000 a year.

The regular archery season in Pennsylvania coincides with one of the best times of the year to be outdoors. The air is crisp, there are fewer people, and the pace is less hectic than in the summer months. The fall coloring encountered in October is an added attraction for the archer who comes to the Allegheny National Forest.

A day spent searching for a white-tailed deer during the peak period of fall coloring is not wasted by the archer even if he misses his quarry. Few places on earth can match the beauty of the Pennsylvania hills when the leaves turn scarlet, orange, yellow, royal purple, and golden bronze.

While the total deer kill by archers in Pennsylvania is relatively light, it is significant. And to stalk a deer within effective range of an arrow demands skill of the highest order. It becomes the closest thing that a modern hunter can achieve in emulating the natural predators—the mountain lion and the timber wolf—that for so many thousands of years kept the deer numbers in balance with their food supply. And by eliminating the small and the weak from the herds, these predators contributed to the survival and betterment of the deer species.

There are no restrictions placed on the bow hunter regarding the deer he hunts. He is permitted to take one deer, but it can be of either sex regardless of its size, during the archery season.

Women Raising Medical Center Cash With Sales

Three local women who enjoy antiques and garage sales are combining their efforts to aid the Sheffield Area Medical Center. Under the leadership of Mrs. Alvera Harris, a combination, rummage sale, antique sale, flea market and bake sale will be held at the old Peterson Store building at the corner of Center and South Main Streets, Sheffield, on Oct. 7, 8 and 9 from 9 a.m. to 8 p.m. daily.

Mrs. Harris will be assisted by Mrs. Ruth Bennett and Mrs. Irene Haser. These three women have had experience in these types of sales and plan to have many surprises.

Those involved with the sale would appreciate donations of any kind. Items needed include: dishes, clothing, lamps, electrical appliances, small furniture, chairs, etc. Anyone having these items should call Alvera Harris at 968-3896; Irene Haser at 968-5697; or Ruth Bennett at 968-3844.

Contributions to this sale are a way of helping the Sheffield Area Medical Center. For those who have not been able to contribute in the past, this is another chance to help.

A bake sale is also being planned in connection with the sale. For those who do not have items for the resale, donations of baked goods would be appreciated.

For all those who bring items to the sale, they should be brought to the old Peterson store building on Oct. 4, 5 and 6 so they can be marked for resale.

Zoners Meet

The Sheffield Zoning and Planning Board met on Monday, Sept. 20. Members decided to see that several properties, which have been littered with junk, will be cleaned. They also made some decisions on zoning in the Sheffield area.

St. Paul's Switches Time For Dinner

The public is notified of the change in day of the regular monthly Sunday dinners, held at St. Paul Center, Saybrook. The dinners which have, in the past, been held the first Sunday of each month, will, beginning Sept. 26, be held the last Sunday of each month. This change was made possible by a change in religious education classes, also held at the Center on Sundays. Classes will not be held on the last Sunday of each month, the day of the dinners.

The first dinner under the new plan will be held Sunday, Sept. 26 from 12 noon until 4 p.m. The menu will feature stuffed pork chops, mashed potatoes and gravy, peas, rolls, beverage and dessert for the usual fee.

This dinner, sponsored by the church societies of St. Anthony's, Sheffield and St. Clara's, Clarendon, will be served in the regular sit-down manner of past public dinners, rather than the "serve yourself" style, used at the recent festival dinners.

WATER COMPANY WORKERS PROBE LEAK

The average persons wouldn't attempt to find a water line leak in the Allegheny River, but men from Warren Water Company were doing just that Thursday in the river area behind Loranger's. The boat is anchored in the general vicinity of the suspected leakage. (Photo by Mansfield).

Woman Hurt In Franklin Accident

FRANKLIN— A 72-year-old Cooperstown woman was slightly injured Tuesday morning after her car damaged three parked autos, sideswiped a fourth, drove through a shrubbery bed in a park and crashed into a large tree in downtown Franklin.

Franklin city police said the car was driven by Hazel J. Allshouse. She was taken to Franklin Hospital after the mishap and then transferred to Titusville Hospital at her request. Police said the woman apparently suffered some sort of attack and appeared to be in shock.

Two of the damaged vehicles, 1970 and 1971 models, were cruisers which are used by the Venango County Sheriff's Department.

Police estimated total damage at $2,380.

GOLDEN HISTORY

CENTRAL CITY, Colo. (AP) — A history richer than gold has kept this tiny mountain town alive a half century after the flow of precious metals stopped from its mines. Each summer "the Richest Square Mile on Earth" relives its heydays, with even the still-lavish opera house reopened for a series of full-scale productions.

Over $80 million was taken from the mine scarred hills here in the last three decades of the 19th century, and in 1873, when President Grant stopped for a visit, the town laid a pavement of solid silver bricks for him to step onto from his coach.

PARK OVERLOOKS CITY

FRANKFORT, Ky. (AP) — A state park will be established on Fort Hill, a 123-acre site on a hill overlooking this capital city. The area was the scene of Indian fighting and a Civil War battle.

The Classified Marketplace

Classified Newspaper Advertising is unique. It is the only medium with a pre-sold audience. Readers seek out the ad that fills their needs, solves their problems, or satisfies their wants; from finding a lost puppy, to selling a million-dollar business or property . . . Here is the total "basic need" medium . . . offering employment . . . shelter . . . transportation . . . covering the full gamut of products and services, business opportunities, homes, automobiles, you name-it!

Once defined by a newspaperman as "News we are paid to print," Classified Advertising is really a medium within a medium. It is the only major form of advertising in which the general public participates as advertisers. Reliable estimates indicate that over 40 million private individuals and families place "Want Ads" each year. These are the ads which fill the newspaper Classified pages with "news" which eager readers can find in no other place. Here is a unique marketplace in which the commercial advertiser can obtain a huge, ready-to-buy audience with a small, low-cost ad. Prepared with the help of ad-advisors, it speeds into the newspaper within hours of its conception!

This Newspaper Classified Section is designed to help tap the Classified marketplace. It aims at four specific objectives: (1) To illustrate the wide variety of advertisers, national and local, using its power, (2) To show the broad range of selling functions being accomplished, (3) To serve as a "How To" manual in helping advertisers build more effective Classified ads, and (4) To offer a creative cross section of Classified advertising that is moving minds and merchandise from coast to coast. Newspaper Classified Advertsing, now in the era of its greatest growth, represents an annual dollar investment in excess of $1,500,000,000. For the advertiser, such a figure assumes special significance when related to other media; he puts more advertising money into Classified than into magazines, or radio, or outdoor, or yellow pages. It is to the success of this investment that we, the Warren Times-Mirror and Observer dedicate these pages.

We have examined the financial documents and accounting records of the Warren County School District as of June 30, 1971. Our examination was made in accordance with generally accepted auditing standards, and accordingly included such tests of the accounting records and such other auditing procedures as were required by law or we considered necessary in the circumstances.

In our opinion, the balance sheet of all the funds and related statement of General Fund operations present fairly the financial position of the Warren County School District as of June 30, 1971, and the results of its recorded operations for the period then ended, in conformity with the principles and procedures established in the manual of accounting and related financial procedures for Pennsylvania school systems applied on a basis consistent with that of the preceding fiscal year.

Which homebuyer will you be when the price freeze is over?

A happy home owner who saved $500 or more?

While the price freeze is still on, your family can have a new Ridge home this Fall — at last Spring's prices.

And depending on which of our 39 basic designs you choose, you can save an average of $500 to well over $700.

But the time to get started is right now! Talk things over with us today.

After all, the price freeze won't last forever.

Or a sad "still waiting"?

Don't kick yourself later on for having missed out on a $500 savings.

Look at it this way: You're going to buy your family a home sooner or later. But waiting just doesn't make any sense when you can build this Fall and save an average of $500 . . . to well over $700. And if you own a building lot you hardly need any cash to get started. You really can't afford to wait. So see us today. Before time runs out on you.

If you're not in the market for a Volkswagen come to Volkswagen.

You may find exactly what you want.

People trade in all makes on new VWs. But before we sell you one, we inspect it.

If it passes, we fix what needed fixing. And guarantee 100% the free repair or replacement of every major working part* for 30 days or 1000 miles. Whichever comes first.

(The same guarantee goes with our used VWs. We get them as trade-ins, too.)

Major Foreign Currencies Rise Thursday As Officials Prepare For IMF Meetings

PARIS—Major foreign currencies rose Thursday on foreign exchange markets as officials of 118 nations began departing for Washington for a week of meetings on the monetary crisis.

What sparked the market activity Thursday was a report by the Kyodo News Service of Japan of substantial currency upvaluations proposed by the International Monetary Fund along with a 3 to 5 per cent devaluation of the dollar.

While most observers considered it doubtful that officials would be able to agree next week on a multilateral realignment of parties, the Kyoda report added a fresh note of uncertainty to a confused situation and stimulated precautionary selling of dollars.

The report was similar to one that had been leaked in Washington about a month ago. The numbers, however, were slightly different.

According to the latest report, the I.M.F. recommended upvaluations of 15.3 per cent for the yen, 12.3 per cent for the West German mark, 11.2 per cent for the Canadian dollar, and 7.2 per cent for the pound sterling.

The Japanese News Agency said the I.M.F. proposals had been worked out in close cooperation with the United States government. If this is true it would mean the Nixon administration is willing to discuss devaluation of the dollar, despite denials of any such plans in Washington.

The German mark was again strongly in demand in the European centers, and although there was additional buying of dollars by the German Central Bank—for the third straight day—the mark rate closed at 3.31 to the dollar. This is equivalent to nearly an 11 per cent upvaluation against the old parity of 3.66.

Earlier this week the German authorities let it be known that they were prepared to hold the floating mark to within a 10 per cent upvaluation limit.

The Bundesbank bought $42 million when the mark reached the 10 per cent level Thursday, but this was insufficient to stem the tide of buying. The Bundesbank then dropped out of the market, although Frankfurt bankers said it was intervening in forward transactions—in other words making contracts to buy dollars in three months.

In Tokyo the yen closed at 337.25 to the dollar, against 337.30 Wednesday. Thursday's rate was equivalent to a 6.745 per cent upward revaluation since the yen was floated on Aug. 28.

Heavy demand for the pound sterling pushed the rate for that currency up to dollars 2.4897, its highest level since President Nixon suspended the dollars convertibility into gold and imposed the 10 per cent import surtax on Aug. 15.

The French franc was the only major European currency not to strengthen Thursday. The closing quotation for francs used in commercial transactions (about 75 per cent of all transactions) was 5.52675 to the dollar, the lowest rate for the franc in 10 days.

The French have put into effect certain tough exchange control measures that have the effect of weakening demand for the franc. These technical factors were behind the market activity, Paris dealers said.

The "commercial" franc is the only major European currency that is not floating. The "financial" franc (used in all transactions except foreign trade) has been created, however, to absorb the influx of dollars. The financial franc traded Thursday at 5.365 to the dollar, equivalent to an upvaluation of 3.73 per cent.

At a news conference Thursday, French President Georges Pompidou said the double market system has been working to his "full satisfaction" and, he added, has even led to an outflow of dollars.

Pompidou Bars Submission To American Policy

(c) N.Y. Times News Service

PARIS—President Georges Pompidou barred Thursday any submission by France to the requirements of American policy and warned her partners against "exorbitant concessions" at the conference of the International Monetary Fund starting next Monday.

Pompidou maintained the firm French position at a news conference that covered a wide range of foreign and domestic topics. But he indicated that he was primarily concerned about the monetary situation by inviting questions first on that subject instead of starting with domestic issues as he usually does.

The French leader acknowledged that President Nixon had to take extreme measures by acting according to the maxim "salus populi suprema lex estum" (let the salvation of the people be the supreme law).

Nixon had made of necessity a virtue Pompidou said by galvanizing the American people around "the triple theme of domestic expansion, external power and the general ingratitude of the entire world regarding his country." But Pompidou added that the long-term fate of these decisions "is another story."

He said everyone would benefit from a recovery of the American economy but there were consequences on international trade, on other currencies and other economies and finally "the fact that the international monetary system is in ruins and will have to be reconstructed."

At this point he made clear that he was not prepared to endanger the French economy to help the United States and that his first reaction was to "spare our country from damaging consequences of the new situation that had been created."

He confirmed that he had personally written, at his vacation retreat in the Riviera, the French statement of Aug. 18 refusing to change the parity of the franc by revaluing or floating it.

He predicted that the United States would not be disposed to "negotiate usefully" on a new monetary system at the monetary fund meeting. "If I am mistaken, so much the better," he said. Then he warned:

"But to want at all costs to arrive at an immediate solution would entail the risk, I am convinced, of leading the partners of the United States into exorbitant concessions and would finally render impossible a balanced solution."

Although he did not mention it, the French are believed to favor an increase in the price of gold, in effect, a devaluation of the dollar, as part of a balanced solution.

Rushing into a solution through concessions, Pompidou said, would get in return only the suppression of the U.S. 10 per cent surtax on imports which he called "just one element in the whole." He described the surtax as "a big stick that might possibly be transformed into a carrot if only one is disposed to play the role of the donkey, which is not our intention."

Pompidou indicated that he was prepared to hold out against American pressure by calling for "leisurely search" for a solution to the crisis. But he warned that time was not unlimited because countries from which the United States was asking concessions might not be able to deliver "if the present crisis led to a general economic recession."

Arts Council Chairman Appointed

HARRISBURG (AP) — Jay C. Leff, a Uniontown banker and former Democratic fund raiser, was appointed Thursday as chairman of the Pennsylvania Council on the Arts.

Leff succeeds Theodore L. Hazlett Jr., of Pittsburgh, who resigned from the non-paying post.

Gov. Shapp said he named Leff because of his "outstanding qualifications."

Leff is a collector and lecturer on art. Before becoming president of the Fayette Bank and Trust Co., he served as vice chairman of the finance committee of the Democratic State Committee.

Pilot Aesthetic Education Programs Launched By Nine School Districts

HARRISBURG (AP) — Nine Pennsylvania school districts are conducting an experimental program using dance, music, theater, and visual arts in the classroom, Gov. Shapp said Thursday.

Under the project, each child is encouraged to participate in diagnosing problems through experiences in the experimental mediums.

Purpose of the project is to stimulate creativity of public school children throughout the state, Shapp said.

The federally funded program has been developed by the education laboratories of CEMREL Inc. The pilot districts are Mars Area, Pittsburgh, Mt. Lebanon, State College, Williamsport, Mifflin County, Council Rock, Radnor Township and Bethlehem Area.

Lehigh University, Indiana University of Pennsylvania and Pennsylvania State University have agreed to work cooperatively with teachers and administrators of these schools.

"These pilot programs in aesthetic education will be available to every Pennsylvania community by 1976 and will represent only one of several measures which the state government views as important to the improvement of the quality of life," Shapp said.
